

Leading Change with AU/NTL Katherine Farquhar Becomes Program's Director

Katherine Farquhar has been named director of AU/NTL, the nationally prominent program for the education of organization development practitioners and organizational leaders. Robert J. Marshak (Ph.D./SPA/1977) has been appointed scholar-in-residence with the program.

The AU/NTL program is a partnership between SPA and the NTL Institute, an organization dedicated to advancing the field of applied behavioral sciences and to developing change agents for effective leadership. Through this partnership, SPA offers the M.S. in Organization Development (MSOD) degree—a program that gives students a solid theoretical and experiential foundation for entering and organizing in this increasingly critical field of organizational development and change.

Katherine Farquhar, an associate professor at SPA since 1989, is a member of NTL. Farquhar has a Ph.D. in social psychology from Boston University, where she studied with Robert Chin, a pioneer in organization development. She also has an M.A. from Harvard University, and a B.A. from Wellesley College. Her research focuses on leadership transitions and non-routine executive departures in nonprofit, educational, and religious organizations.

Robert J. Marshak is among the most respected scholars in the field of organization development. He is also an NTL member and has taught in the AU/NTL program since its inception in 1980. He is a prolific writer and theorist. His forthcoming book, Covert Processes at Work: Managing the Five Hidden Dimensions of Organizational Change (Berrett-Koehler), will be published this year. He holds a B.A. from Duke University and an M.P.A. and Ph.D. in public administration from SPA. He is the recipient of the OD Network's Lifetime Achievement Award, given for outstanding contributions to the theory and practice of organization development.

Tim Lannan (MSOD/SPA/2002) hosted AU/NTL alumni, faculty and friends at his New York home in April. In addition to discussing trends in the field of OD and news from the AU/NTL program Farquhar provided updates on the Morley Segal and Edith Whitfield Seashore Fellowship. Established in 2005, the fellowship funded three scholarships this year. The awardees are Enju Lee, Brooklyn, N.Y. (MSOD/SPA/2007); Julie Myers, Washington, D.C., (MSOD/SPA/2006); and Judit Revesz, Rockway, N.J. (MSOD/SPA/2008). Pictured below are Dora Graye (MSOD/SPA/1999), AU/NTL Alumni Association President Ka Fwellen (MSOD/SPA/2000), and Deborah Howard (MSOD/SPA/1999).

Dress Rehearsal for Life

SPA's Leadership Program Comes of Age

Six Teach for America finalists, three Truman Nominees, one Peace Corps volunteer, one each accepted to graduate programs at Harvard, Princeton, and Syracuse. All these notes of achievement come from one cohort of students. The Leadership Program—SPA's competitive undergraduate program that builds character and commitment—has come of age.

The program, which regularly accepts 30 freshmen each year, provides a hands-on approach to learning leadership. Starting in their freshman year, students develop service projects in which they collaborate with local organizations to help serve the community. Students also learn about the history of leadership, conflict resolution, negotiation—and about each other. As seniors, they have fine-tuned their presentation and public speaking skills in addition to forging a strong sense of professional ethics.

"It's a dress rehearsal for life," Leadership Program Director Sarah Stiles explained. "You want to get it right, but there's room for making mistakes."

Leadership program alumni confirm that the bonds formed through the program are unique.

"We all come to AU with different hopes and aspirations, and the Leadership Program is a way to stay connected and engaged with other students who shared in the notion that giving back on and off campus was part of the learning experience," said Ken Biberaj (BA/SPA/2002).

After leaving AU, Biberaj completed a master's degree in public policy at Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government. He worked in former President Bill Clinton's Harlem, N.Y., office and on Sen. John Kerry's 2004 presidential campaign before becoming director of investment sales for Broadway West Enterprises, Ltd., a commercial real estate company in Manhattan.

"I felt that the strength of the program gave me, as an alumnus, a special bond with SPA," Biberaj said.

First-year Stanford law student Samantha Brown (BA/SPA/2003) said the program has given her more confidence in her abilities. After graduation, Brown spent a year in Beijing, studying Chinese and teaching English.

"The internship and community service project provide experience I can point to and draw from....You want more than your GPA to show for all the time you spend at school, and the program was a great way to infuse my education with a backdrop of real accomplishments," Brown said.

A weekend conference on leadership for students from local universities is being planned for next year.

Meanwhile, Leadership Program graduates make up an exceptionally dedicated group of networkers.

"Alums from the program regularly send me the inside scoop on job and internship opportunities," Stiles said. "These have proved to be life-changing opportunities for students." ★

TAKING THE LEAD: Judy Meritz (BS/SPA/1975), pictured here with her husband Larry Meritz (BA/SPA/1975), has become president of the SPA Alumni Chapter of Washington. The DC chapter works to provide network, internship and job opportunities for SPA students and alumni. The chapter also hosts work groups based on student interest and alumni employment areas: government relations; federal, state, and local government; and the nonprofit sector. Please contact Jenine Rabin at 202-885-3968 or by email at rabin@american.edu for more information.

On a recent trip to Miami to visit with area SPA alumni, Dean William M. LeoGrande was presented with a key to the city of Miami Beach by Mayor David Dermer (BA/SPA/1983). Florida has one of SPA's highest alumni residence concentrations, following the DC area, New York, Philadelphia, and Boston.

In Memoriam

Dean Emeritus Earl H. DeLong, 97, passed away in March. He served as dean at AU from 1963 until his retirement in 1972. Dr. DeLong led the then-named School of Government and Public Administration during the years in which it grew into one of the leading programs of its kind in the nation. Dr. DeLong received a doctorate from Northwestern University in 1933 where he began his career as a member of the political science faculty. He joined the U.S. Civil Service Commission in 1941 before serving in the Marine Corps during World War II. His career also included service at the Veterans Administration, the Office of the Secretary of Defense, and the Central Intelligence Agency's Office of Clandestine Services and Special Operations Research Office.

Rovinsky, who is currently studying at Hebrew University.

Established through the generosity of Patricia L. Glaser, BA/SPA/1969, and her husband Samuel H. Mudie, the scholarship honors Glaser's late mother, Jane R. Glaser. As an AU alumna and a member of the National Board of Directors of the American Friends of Hebrew University, Glaser created the scholarship so that she could share the unique history of Hebrew University with future leaders from AU and restore the study abroad relationship with the university.

For more information on scholarships or the School of Public Affairs, please visit the following links: www.american.edu/aneau/scholarships.cfm, www.spa.american.edu ★

Do you want to help guarantee SPA's standing as a top public affairs program? For more information on planned giving, contact Jenine Rabin (202-885-3968, rabin@american.edu) or Seth Speyer (202-885-5914, speyer@american.edu).

SPRING 2006 update

Published three times a year by the American University's School of Public Affairs

William M. LeoGrande
Dean
Jacqueline McLaughlin Linde
Assistant Dean—Marketing, Admissions and Outreach
Margaret A. Weekes
Associate Dean—Academic Affairs
Jenine Rabin
Director of Development
Laura L. Murray
Assistant Dean—Budget and Administration
Jacqueline Corbett
Director of Communications
On the cover: Pediment of the National Archives (GETTY IMAGES)
www.spa.american.edu
202.885.2940

Writers: Jacqueline Corbett, Sean Miller. Some material has been adapted from the American Weekly. Photos courtesy of Anne Doyle, J. Brett, Mark Parker, J. Rovinsky, Hilary Schwab Shapiro, Jeff Watts/American University.

SCHOOL of PUBLIC AFFAIRS

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY ★ WASHINGTON, D.C.

SPRING 2006

update

2 Beryl Radin Rates the Performance Movement

3 Massachusetts Alumni in Public Service

4 New Director of AU/NTL Katherine Farquhar

A new AU

Lobbying For Reform: Obama Keynotes SPA Panel

MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN

Friends,

As you remember, the quad comes alive at this time of year with students enjoying the blue skies and the first sign of our trademark tulips. This spring has brought particular energy to the School of Public Affairs as well.

I am proud to report that for the second year in a row, AU is the nation's top producer of Presidential Management Fellows. The PMF program is the federal government's competitive program for graduate students. SPA students will take up challenging work, building on their classroom experience. I am proud of them and wish them the very best in this next chapter of their life.

Undergraduate alumni will be pleased to learn how increasingly coveted their experience at AU has become. Applications for incoming freshmen places—the class of 2010—have reached a record number. Additionally, our graduate applications increased 13 percent. We recently welcomed to campus over 100 students admitted to the master's and Ph.D. programs. I and my faculty colleagues were impressed by the quality and ambition of these graduate candidates.

Our Key master's program continues to set the standard for executive education as the only accredited executive MPA program in the nation. The recent cohort, number 32, included executives from the World Bank, Soros Foundation, and the Departments of Justice and State, among other agencies. Key's Action Learning curriculum continues to bring vitality to the classroom and meaningful transformations to the agencies of the students who lead and learn in this program.

Finally, I am pleased to share with you that SPA now has 20 donor-funded scholarships and endowments. The foresight of our benefactors has provided over $35,000 in scholarship support this year, enabling top students to pursue their studies. I want to personally express my thanks to SPA's many friends and alumni who contributed to this achievement.

Best wishes,

William M. LeoGrande

William M. LeoGrande

Lobbying reform has been the center of activity in Washington, the city that is home to the industry; and the School of Public Affairs, in turn, is at the center of the debate. SPA's Center for Congressional and Presidential Studies (CCPS), under the leadership of James Thurber, recently convened a panel of experts and leaders including Sen. Barack Obama, the Democrats' point man on the issue.

Thurber, a distinguished professor of government at SPA, is a renowned expert on lobbying and the political process.

CCPS's Public Affairs and Advocacy Institute has been training lobbyists for 14 years, and Thurber himself teaches a course on lobbying and ethics. His expertise enables him to evaluate the mistakes of the past and analyze the myriad proposed reform measures now circulating through the halls of Congress.

"Every generation that comes along seems to distrust Congress more and more. We need to have more transparency and have people start to trust the process," Thurber said. "We have a fragile democracy, and if you dissipate trust in democracy, it's very hard then for the institution to implement policy and have it accepted. Most Americans think Congress is corrupt, that lobbyists are corrupt. They don't think of it as First Amendment rights, and that's bad."

"It undermines democracy, and I don't think there's anything bigger than that." What emerged from the panel held at the National Press Club in January was a consensus that America's political system is now broken, and significant change is necessary to begin freeing it from the stranglehold of those with money, power, and inside access.

"I believe a serious conversation about reform would be one that would be good for this town to have in the coming months," said Obama, the freshman senator from Illinois. "Instead of meeting with lobbyists, we should meet with the 45 million Americans without health care. All these people do to influence the process is cast their vote. In our democracy, it's all they should have to do."

Sen. Barack Obama (D-Ill.) with SPA Distinguished Professor James Thurber at CCPS's Lobbying Reform Summit.

Both parties have introduced ills that would tighten some of the current rules on lobbying—which often go unenforced. In the coming months, banning privately funded travel for legislators and barring lobbyists from paying for members' or staffers' meals will be debated.

"It should be said up front that trips by lawmakers are a

Lobbying, page 3

LEADING BY EXAMPLE: Susie Kay (BA/SPA/1986) shared stories, struggles, and successes of founding the nonprofit Hoop Dreams Scholarship Fund with SPA graduate students at the February Professional Development Series. Since 1996, Kay's work has brought nearly 1,000 DC public high school students closer to college and career success through scholarships, SAT prep, and mentoring relationships with dedicated professionals while building bridges between diverse communities in the Washington region. Other alumni participating in the Professional Development Series included Alan Mertz (MA/SPA/1980), president of the American Clinical Laboratory Association, and Don Bathurst (MPA/SPA/1990), chief administrative officer of the Department of Homeland Security.

SCHOOL of PUBLIC AFFAIRS
AMERICAN UNIVERSITY • WASHINGTON, D.C.
4400 Massachusetts Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20016-8022

Presorted
First Class
U.S. Postage
PAID
Washington, D.C.
Permit #966

SPA HAPPENINGS

APRIL 17 Ceasefire on Health Care: CCPS presents former HHS secretaries Donna Shalala and Tommy Thompson in a forum moderated by former senator John Breaux.

APRIL 21 Freshman Day
SPA Advisory Council Meeting

APRIL 27 SHAPE Carmen Group's Policy Forum: Potential for Division: The Stem Cell Debate
8:15pm • Ward Circle Building

MAY 2 SPA Government Relations Breakfast
Cosmos Club

MAY 3 Key Executive Leadership Program Alumni Event
David Pegrum (MPA/SPA/2001), Key 25
6:00-8:00 p.m. • Mary Graydon Center

MAY 12 The Morley Segal and Edith Whitfield Seashore Fellowship Award Ceremony
5:30-7:00pm • SIS Lounge

MAY 14 SPA Commencement
4:30 p.m. • Bender Arena
Paul Volker, Speaker

JUNE 13 Congressional Oversight Conference-CCPS
U.S. Comptroller General David Walker

FOR MORE INFORMATION

★ Jenine Rabin
✉ rabin@american.edu
☎ 202.885.3968
http://spa.american.edu/alumni

The SPA Capitol Hill Alumni Association keeps alumni connected through events on the Hill and elsewhere. Members include Rob Engel (BA/SPA/1982, MPA/SPA/2004), executive director, Committee for an Effective Congress; Will Stone (BA/SPA/1985), executive vice president, Advocacy Inc.; Sarah Simmons (BA/SPA/1995, MA/SPA/1997), consultant for Gov. Schwarzenegger's reelection campaign; Eric Eikenberg (BA/SPA/1999), chief of staff, Rep. E. Clay Shaw, Jr.; Tom Dower (BA/SPA/1996), legislative director for Sen. Arlen Specter; Joan Woodward (BA/SPA/1986, MAP/SPA/1995), vice president, Global Markets Institute, Goldman Sachs; and Keith Pemrick (BA/SPA/2000), legislative director for Rep. Tim Holden.

Beryl Radin Challenges the Performance Movement

SPA's Scholar in Residence Beryl Radin found herself early in her career mired in process as a staffer on the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. That experience spurred her career as a scholar seeking to explain the often frustrating inner workings of government. Radin's unique insights and scholarship grew to be of value to cabinet secretaries, students of public administration, and governments around the world, including New Zealand, Australia, and India (where she is involved in planning a global conference on federalism in 2007). Following Beyond Machiavelli: Policy Analysis Comes of Age (Georgetown University Press, 2000) and The Accountable Juggler: The Art of Leadership in a Federal Agency (CQ Press, 2002) comes her latest effort: Challenging the Performance Movement: Accountability, Complexity, and Democratic Values (Georgetown University Press, 2006). Here, Radin examines the recent yen for numbers and metrics in the contemporary landscape. The scholar and author, so renowned that a prize given by the Public Management Research Association bears her name, discusses her work.

Q What was most interesting and most surprising to you in writing this book?

A I've always tried to write about issues that were topical, and clearly I've attempted to address issues that I feel are important. The interest in the performance movement started out because I worked on this issue when I was at HHS.

Researching this book confirmed to me that public administration reform efforts at the federal level often don't work. What I saw was that many of the issues of program planning, budgets, and systems reappear in another guise. They don't even go underground; they just take new forms.

You have to find new solutions.

Yes, and be more realistic. Typically the reform comes from the White House. It's one-size-fits-all for the whole government. It doesn't work everywhere. They don't seem to be able to learn from our mistakes. We just keep repeating them-like the movie Groundhog Day! If you were a government worker, you'd say, "I've seen this movie before." It breeds cynicism.

What is the antidote?

Nobody wants to be against performance measures in principle. My book includes vignettes about people who care about performance, but their work is demeaned by the criteria that are used by performance requirements.

This movement doesn't take into account their reality—whether it's dealing with Congress or state and local governments. There are too many times when public-sector workers are held accountable for programs over which they don't have control. There are people who care about performance, and they can't do what makes sense to them.

You've written about leadership in government. Are there certain characteristics that you need to have in order to lead effectively?

It really depends on the agency. HHS has over 300 programs. You have to deal with a lot of different cultures and issues. You can't make change using command-and-control methods. Some programs have clarity in their goals. Others involve goals in which there is no agreement on the correct method to address them.

There is no one best way to manage all of the government programs. First of all, people need to know something substantive about the programs they are leading. The best thing to do is to talk to people about what they are trying to accomplish. There is a frequent disconnect between their efforts and what they think they are trying to do. If there is any sort of lesson, it is that people need to be modest about what they can accomplish; and they need first to understand the culture of the organization.

Looking ahead, do you see big changes for agencies?

The big problem are the predictable demographic shifts. There will be a huge number of people retiring. SPA trains people for leadership in the federal government; this is a part of our mission. The fact that AU is number one with the Presidential Management Fellows is great. But top students are now considering state and local governments and nonprofits. The feds have competition.

Is there a really well-run agency?

Ten years ago, you would have said FEMA. The Centers for Disease Control was a leading example for a while, but they seem to be under a lot of pressure now. It's so volatile. A lot of it is the accident of history. There may be a particularly good time for an issue, an agency, or a very good manager. Most would say that a good agency is one that has heroic leadership. I don't think that's the case. It's the quiet, mid-level, career people who are doing a good job. And they are under all kinds of pressure.

Including the performance movement.

Right. We have become obsessed with counting things. It's not just management. A few examples: No Child Left Behind and health care. Even foundations are putting these metrics in place—often inappropriately. It's driving compliance and driving out other important work. It's often difficult to measure outcomes. Many agencies are "coping organizations." They find it difficult to measure either outcomes or outputs.

And there is a lot of gaming going on, such as teachers teaching to the test. People in government agencies adopt a compliance attitude that doesn't really touch the substance of their work.

Are there bright spots?

Career people try to keep programs going and do a good job. They need to be respected. Congress is getting more sensitive to this issue. Jim Thurber of CCPS and I are working on an upcoming conference on congressional oversight. There seems to be an indication that members of Congress are deciding they can stand up to the White House. There are questions being raised about NSA, Medicare Part D, FEMA, and generally questions about the war. Congress is being more assertive than a year ago. Congress is exerting its institutional stance rather than a political one. ★ explores public administration's big ideas and issues and questions the success of contemporary efforts to "reinvent government." Taking Waldo's ideas as a starting point, Rosenbloom and McCurdy revisit and update his key concepts and consider their applicability for today.

MEDIA

■ Dean William M. LeoGrande's op-ed in the Miami Herald addressed the U.S. ban on travel to Cuba and the recent exception granted to the Cuban national team to play in the World Baseball Classic. LeoGrande was also quoted by the Associated Press regarding the UNESCO award given to Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, and by the Washington Examiner regarding Chavez's low-cost fuel offer to residents of Massachusetts.

■ DPAP Assistant Professor Alison Jackowitz was quoted by Knight Ridder on her co-authored

ALUMNI OF NOTE

James "Jim" Brett (BA/SPA/1973) launched his political career from his McDowell dorm room. He was only running for freshman class president of the Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity, but it helped him prepare for things to come.

"I really started building my organization there," Brett recalls, adding he was lucky to find a roommate who shared his passion for politics.

Brett and Larry Stern (BA/SPA/1973), his roommate and unofficial campaign manager, did a repeat performance years later for Brett's try for Boston city council. The campaign was literally textbook: The plan they used was pulled from an SPA course they had taken together.

Stern, now a vice president with a Florida company, says Brett stood out as a leader and a friend. "There's no one finer than Jim Brett. He just does good."

Brett is president and CEO of the New England Council, one of the country's oldest regional economic development organizations. As CEO, he coordinates the interests of small businesses, health care providers, and academic institutions to improve the quality of life in New England. After leaving AU, Brett earned master's degrees in public administration from both Suffolk University and Harvard's Kennedy School of Government.

In Brett's 15-year career in the Massachusetts state legislature, he distinguished himself in taking on legislative responsibility. He led committees on banking and taxation and co-sponsored legislation that led to the creation of 11,000 jobs. He also served on the Joint Committee on Criminal Justice, a position for which he had first-hand experience.

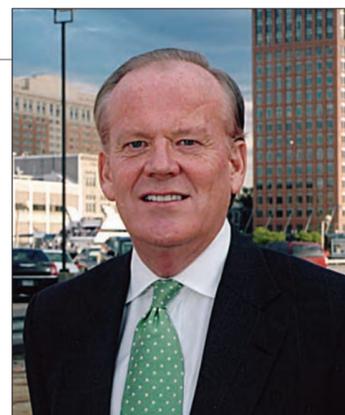

While a student working to offset loans, Brett walked the beat as a Capitol Hill police officer.

"I was reading political science books about congressmen and senators and then discussing issues with them. It was an extraordinary time."

Brett also worked as a mail room staffer in the office of Representative John McCormack (D-MA)—the result of early networking. Brett was his newspaper boy back home in Dorchester.

Brett wrote McCormack asking for a job; the congressman obliged. He was happy to help out 1964's Newspaper Boy of the Year.

McCormack told Brett "the way you can thank me, is if you're ever in a position to help some one else, do it."

After leaving the Bay State's legislature and joining the New England Council, Brett has taken on volunteer leadership commitments particularly in the area of mental disabilities. Brett was drawn to this cause through personal experience; his brother is mentally disabled.

"Being involved and helping your neighbor, making a difference—that's what it's all about."

Brett has remained loyal to his neighborhood. With his wife Pattie, Brett continues to live in the historic, traditionally-Irish area of Boston.

Today, whenever Brett gives speeches, the host inevitably mentions his connection to his alma mater. Usually people will come up to him afterward and say 'my son or daughter goes to AU.' I'm hearing it more and more." ★

Noted Massachusetts Alumni in Public Service

Robert Cerasoli, former inspector general for the State of Massachusetts (BA/SPA/1969) ★ Matthew Amorello, chairman of the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority and former state senator (MPA/SPA/1983) ★ Richard Tisei, Massachusetts state senator (BA/SPA/1984) ★ John Locke, former Massachusetts state representative (BA/SPA/1986) ★ Mark D. Sylvia, Plymouth town manager (MPA/SPA/1996 and MPA/SPA/1998) ★ U.S. Representative James McGovern (BA/CAS/1981, MPA/SPA/1984) ★ the late Leonard Zakim (BA/SPA/1975), executive director of the New England Region of the Anti-Defamation League and founder of the Lenny Zakim Fund.

Masters Program, was quoted in Federal Computer Week regarding workers' advancement.

■ Annica Larsen (MA/SPA/2005), presidential management fellow with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, offered her perspective on being a young federal worker on FEDtalk on WFED, the federal government's radio station in metropolitan Washington.

Lobbying for Reform

continued from page 1

very good thing," said panelist Lee Hamilton, who served as a representative from Indiana for 34 years. "I think you can get a lot of insight by getting out there and poking around. I think there's good travel and bad travel that serves a recreational purpose or the interests of those who are bankrolling it. If a member of Congress needs to travel, the United States government should pay for it. If a trip is not important enough for the United States government to pay for it, it is probably not important enough to the people's business."

Under current rules, private groups can fund congressional information-gathering junkets. Often, these trips are taken to major metropolitan cities or warm weather climates in the dead of Washington's winter. Even when the agenda is more legitimate, Hamilton believes the trips can have a damaging effect.

"They control your life; they control the agenda; they control your schedule," the Democrat said of the lobbyists who foot the bill. "It gives the special interests a huge advantage in the legislative process."

Regardless of what reforms eventually are adopted, the key to their successful implementation will be enforcement, said Fred Wertheimer, president and CEO of Democracy 21, an advocacy group he founded in 1997.

"We have proposed to create an Office of Public Integrity in Congress. If you do not change the way the rules are enforced in Congress, in the end you will have new rules that are just as unenforceable as the old rules," said Wertheimer, who the New York Times called "the lobbyist most closely associated with pressing to change the system."

Despite calls for bipartisanship during the reform process, Republican and Democratic proposals do contain some differences. Democrats, for example, want to prohibit lobbyists from paying for any meals for members, while Republicans would like to cap meal spending at $20.

"Real reform means eliminating all gifts and meals from lobbyists, not just the expensive ones," Obama said. "Ninety-five percent of the American public spends less than $20 on lunch. I get paid enough to buy my own lunch." ★

Learn Lobbying in Brussels, the Heart of the E.U.

June 25-July 7, 2006

Modeled on CCPS's internationally recognized Public Affairs and Advocacy Institute, this course is a unique opportunity for professionals, graduate students, and upper level undergraduates to learn the art and craft of lobbying from leading international experts, diplomats, and practitioners. For more information, contact Melissa Castle at 202-885-3491 or via e-mail ccps@american.edu.

SPA HONORS

AU—Once Again Top in the Nation With PMFs; Leader in Peace Corps Volunteers

For the second year in a row, AU boasts more presidential Management Fellows (PMFs) than any other school in the country. AU also recently ranked fourth nationally among medium-sized colleges and universities in percentage of undergraduates who volunteer in the Peace Corps.

With its 34 of 552 finalists, AU students lead the nation with emerging leaders in federal service. These graduate and law students were selected for the federal government's prestigious two-year program, which puts fellows on the fast track to high-level management positions. The PMF Program was established in 1977 to attract to the federal service outstanding individuals from a wide variety of academic disciplines who have an interest in and commitment to a career in the analysis and management of public policies and programs. SPA finalists are Lisa Davis, James Hedrick, Sarah Jones, Jana Locke, Elizabeth Nagorski, Nicholas Phend, and Rachael Schacherer.

With 34 Peace Corps volunteers, AU ranked above Brown, George Washington, Yale, and James Madison. Since it was founded in 1961, 663 AU alumni have joined the organization, making the university the 53rd largest producer of volunteers.

JLS Professor Brian Forst received the 2006 Book of the Year Award from the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences for Errors of Justice: Nature, Sources and Remedies (Cambridge University Press, 2004).

In January, JLS Professor Emilio C. Viano was elected to the Board of Directors of the International Society of Criminology in Paris. The ISC is a nongovernmental organization with nearly 1,000 members all at senior levels of academia, justice, and administration.

James A. Thurber, distinguished professor and director of the Center for Congressional and Presidential Studies, recently testified on lobbying reform before the U.S. Senate Committee on Rules and Administration, chaired by Sen. Trent Lott, and before the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Rules. He also testified before the U.S. Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, chaired by Sen. John McCain, on the Federal Election Campaign Act.

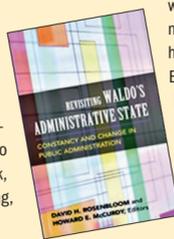

Government Professor and Director of SPA's Women & Politics Institute Karen O'Connor participated in a panel discussion, "Towards a Global Network for Research on Women and Politics" at the United Nation's 50th Session of the Commission on the Status of Women. O'Connor addressed the significance for society of empowering college women. The event marked the launch of the Women and Global Research Connect (WPGRC), a network of university-based centers conducting research on women and politics. O'Connor also recently testified before the Subcommittee on the Constitution House Judiciary Committee on Roe v. Wade.

Dean William M. LeoGrande gave the Martin Diskin/Oxfam Memorial Lecture at the March conference of the Latin American Studies Association, the principal international scholarly organization dedicated to the study of Latin America.

BOOKS, PUBLICATIONS AND MEDIA

BOOKS

■ The prevailing notion that the best government is achieved through principles of business practices is hardly new. This "gospel of efficiency" was challenged by scholar Dwight Waldo in 1948 in his pioneering book, The Administrative State. Asking, "efficiency for what?" Waldo warned that public administrative efficiency must be backed by a framework of consciously held democratic values. Based on an SPA conference on Waldo's legacy, DPAP Professors David H. Rosenbloom and Howard E. McCurdy have collected the wisdom of their distinguished peers in Revisiting Waldo's Administrative State: Constancy and Change in Public Administration (Georgetown University Press, June 2006). The book explores public administration's big ideas and issues and questions the success of contemporary efforts to "reinvent government." Taking Waldo's ideas as a starting point, Rosenbloom and McCurdy revisit and update his key concepts and consider their applicability for today.

MEDIA

■ Dean William M. LeoGrande's op-ed in the Miami Herald addressed the U.S. ban on travel

to Cuba and the recent exception granted to the Cuban national team to play in the World Baseball Classic. LeoGrande was also quoted by the Associated Press regarding the UNESCO award given to Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez, and by the Washington Examiner regarding Chavez's low-cost fuel offer to residents of Massachusetts.

■ DPAP Assistant Professor Alison Jackowitz was quoted by Knight Ridder on her co-authored study revealing the negligible long-term benefits of full-day versus half-day kindergarten. The study has also been cited in the Washington Post, Cincinnati Enquirer, San Francisco Chronicle, and other national media.

■ SPA Distinguished Professor James Thurber appeared on NPR's Fresh Air with Terry Gross to discuss Congressional efforts on lobbying reform.

■ Robert Tobias, director of SPA's Key Executive