Letter from the Director and Curator

As we complete our thirteenth year of operation, we can look back and see tremendous growth in virtually every measurable category: critical reviews, publications, programs, tours, volunteers, collections, staff, memberships, fundraising, and attendance. Associate Director Kristi-Anne Shaer and the AU Museum staff compiled this report to show how far we have come in just the past year. It also demonstrates the success of our strategic thinking as we:

- Continue to increase the length and decrease the number of our exhibitions to allow more time to plan and execute high-quality programs and publications. This year we presented 26 exhibitions, down from 29 last fiscal year.

- Prepare for the acquisition of 9,000 objects from the Corcoran Art Collection. We have partnered with the College of Arts and Sciences and Office of Development to focus more energy and resources on fundraising in order to augment our storage capacity, make our collection accessible, grow our staff, and ensure full participation in the University’s upcoming Capital Campaign.

- Begin a strategic planning process that will prepare the museum and university for the financial challenges that accompany a growing collection and further integrate the museum into the life and educational mission of the university.

I would like to thank our talented museum team and partners across the university for their hard work and support over the past year. We are flourishing in reputation and aesthetic achievement in a city of great museums. The future is only going to get brighter.

Jack Rasmussen
CORCORAN LEGACY COLLECTION

The American University Museum has been chosen as the recipient of nearly 9,000 works of art from the Corcoran Art Collection.¹ We plan to use this once-in-a-lifetime gift to establish The Corcoran Legacy Collection at American University. To give you a taste of this new collection, it contains some of history’s most masterful artists such as the 16th-century Italian painter Titian, American artists Ansel Adams and Helen Frankenthaler; 18th-century British portraitist Thomas Gainsborough, as well as important American collections such as those of William A. Clark and Olga Hirshhorn.

In the spirit of our Alper Initiative for Washington Art, we are very excited to expand upon our collection of 20th-century Washington art, with works from the Washington Color School and paintings by figurative artists such as Sarah Baker, Manon Cleary, and Claudia DeMonte.

The gift will also supplement our collection of work by female artists and artists of color, in alignment with the legacy of the American University Art History department, a leader in feminist art history, and the university’s commitment to diversity and inclusion.

For those who are curious, you may view the Corcoran’s May 14th press release and the Washington Post announcement in the “Art in the News” section of the Annual Report.

In order to prepare for the legacy collection at AU, the university has invested in a new storage facility that will be home to works utilized most often by the museum, complete with rolling racks and shelving. We have also upgraded our collections management software and will be working with the registrars at the National Gallery of Art to incorporate the data on the new collection.

With every great collection comes great responsibility. We still have much work to do! American University is seeking support through a funding initiative designed to further expand our storage capacity, enhance the museum’s exhibition space to accommodate the growing collection, and safeguard the Corcoran legacy for the greater arts community. We also aspire to create a collection viewing and study room to provide increased accessibility to scholars and visitors and new faculty and staff positions to care for the collection and ensure it is shared with the world through public program offerings.

We will continue to update you as this project progresses and look forward to celebrating this transformational milestone with you!

¹ AU Museum’s 2016-2017 Annual Report mentioned an expected gift of 7,000 works of art from the Corcoran. The gift increased by nearly 2,000 works before it was made official in 2018.

FREDERIC KELLOGG: WORKS IN OIL AND WATERCOLOR
Curated by E.A. Carmean Jr.
Kellogg’s work belongs within—and extends—what could be called a river of traditional American landscape, figural and still-life painting; a broad, quarter-millennium course flowing from John Singleton Copley and Thomas Cole to Milton Avery and Andrew Wyeth. Kellogg works by a combination of sketches made in his constant-companion notebook, of watercolors done en plein air, or in the studio from notes, or painting in oil on canvas. All three forms were included in this exhibition, featuring landscapes from Maine and Washington, DC where Kellogg splits his time.

VAL LEWTON: FROM HOLLYWOOD TO BREEZEWOOD
From Hollywood to Breezewood, a retrospective of Val Lewton, brought it all to bear; Lewton's lifetime in front of the canvas, his knowledge of color, his unerring command of the paint-loaded brush and his certitude about how best to structure a painting. Lewton was born in California, the son of a film director, and moved to Washington to work as an exhibit designer at the Smithsonian American Art Museum (then the National Collection of Fine Arts). His paintings use the artifacts of traffic and run of the mill objects—cars, trucks, roadways, semi-demolished buildings, and paint cans—to create improbably beautiful and personal compositions.

STATES OF MIND: CUBA AND NORTH KOREA BY CARL DE KEYZER
This exhibition featured 60 photographs of two communist nations, North Korea and Cuba, by award-winning Belgian photographer Carl De Keyzer. The series of North Korean and Cuban photographs were shown together for the first time. They are the result of De Keyzer’s extensive stay in each country, including more than 40 nights in North Korea, spent visiting and documenting each province in the country. De Keyzer is a globally renowned photographer and member of Magnum Photos, an international photographic collective, and the recipient of 17 international awards. The photographs in this exhibition powerfully captured both the struggles and leisure of everyday Cubans and North Koreans in uncommon scenes. Essay by Barbara Rose.
ESCAPE: FOON SHAM
Foon Sham, a master of wood sculpture, created two monumental, horizontal and vertical tunnels for the American University Museum. The site-specific work Escape was meant to be entered and experienced phenomenologically. An immigrant himself, Sham built Escape in response to the hotly-contested issues of immigration and the plight of the refugee. It provided concealment and beacons of light.

I AM: AN EAST-WEST ARTS INITIATIVE ORGANIZED BY CARAVAN
Curated by Janet Rady
I AM was a strategic peacebuilding exhibition organized by CARAVAN that showcased the insights and experiences of Middle Eastern women as they confront issues of culture, religion and social reality in a rapidly changing world both in the Middle East and West. It addressed today's critical and increasing need of creating respect, developing understanding and encouraging friendship between the Middle East and West.

TWIST – LAYER – POUR: SONDRA N. ARKIN, JOAN BELMAR, MARY EARLY
Curated by Sarah Tanguy
In Twist – Layer – Pour, the unexpected grouping of Sondra N. Arkin, Joan Belmar, and Mary Early yielded a dynamic, site-responsive meditation on systemized components and accumulated wholes. Step by step, link by link, their obsessive object making became a metaphor for conscious and intuitive gesture, relational interconnectivity, and the passage of time. At once public and private, monumental and intimate, the works professed an unswerving passion for their chosen materials: steel wire, synthetic papers, and beeswax. Individual variances and details invited close attention while in the aggregate, distilled shapes and rhythmic patterns emerged.

BETWEEN TWO ROUNDS OF FIRE, THE EXILE OF THE SEA: ARAB MODERN AND CONTEMPORARY WORKS FROM THE BARJEEL ART FOUNDATION
Curated by Karim Sultan
The works from the collection of the Barjeel Art Foundation, United Arab Emirates, illustrated an array of technologies of conflict. Conflict was defined as taking place on either a sociological or psychological plane, through assertions of language, between histories or between peoples, and the body itself as a site of conflict. This exhibition also explored mechanisms of power, and the power of artists to recognize and employ these mechanisms to directly address the issues of conflict, or more abstractly, notions of space, language, memory, geography, categorization, and identification that are part of conflict.
TETHERED TO THE CRADLE: KINETIC WORK BY CHRISTOPHER CARTER
Curated by Aria Gannon
Christopher Carter’s substantial and important sculptures were intended to invite viewer interaction, reflection and contemplation. The ready-made forms drew on Carter’s experiences and memories of his adolescence for their inspiration. The individual pieces comprising the totality of the work interacted with each other, suggesting viewers reflect on the weight and meaning of their own experience of growing up.

WILLIAM WOODWARD: THE SEVEN DEADLY SINS
For the past two decades, William Woodward has delved into the rich history and aesthetic possibilities of the seven deadly sins. The master drawings and narrative paintings in this exhibition owed a great deal to the films of Federico Fellini, Charlie Chaplin, Buster Keaton, and the commedia dell’arte tradition. The artist tried to imagine, had these directors and actors been painters, how they might have depicted their subjects in whimsical and elusive ways rather than strident and explicit interpretations.

RADIX: THE ETERNAL FEMININE
Curated by Claudia Rousseau, Ph.D.
RADIX was a collaboration of three Washington artists: Cianne Fragione, Pat Goslee and Anne Marchand. All three had been working, in paintings and assemblages, with the concept of The Eternal Feminine. Defying simple definition, this concept had different but analogous meanings for each artist. Each found a means to express this feminine energy in contemporary and abstract terms, from her own perspective.

Anne Marchand, Eternal Feminine, 2017

RECENT ACQUISITIONS TO THE ROTHFELD COLLECTION OF CONTEMPORARY ISREALI ART
The Rothfeld Collection of Contemporary Israeli Art, part of the American University Museum’s permanent collection, inspired dialog about political and cultural issues involving Israel through the paintings, sculptures, and mixed media work of prominent and emerging Israeli artists. The collection was gifted to the AU Museum by Donald Rothfeld in 2011 and has been growing ever since.

ERIK THOR SANDBERG
This exhibition featured a series of new paintings by American artist Erik Thor Sandberg within the context of selected earlier works. Sandberg is known internationally for pushing the skillful illusionism of master oil painting to the current edge of Magic Realism on three-dimensional wood panels of his own design. Grounded in humanism, Sandberg’s paintings present a compelling contemporary expression of how people connect with each other, nature and basic elements of life.

VITAL SIGNS
Curated by Meskerem Assegued
Abel Tilahun, a multidisciplinary artist from Ethiopia, explored universal human experience through the manifold meanings we associate with the human body, its parts, its sustenance, and its loftiest ambitions in Vital Signs. The exhibition reflected the artist’s skill in sculptural installation, video art, painting, and drawing, linked by a common thread of semiotic concerns and an unwavering voice of his generation. Tilahun maintains a studio practice both in Washington, DC and Addis Ababa.

THOMAS DOWNING AND THE SUBLIME
DECORATIVE
Downing’s distinctive geometrically organized canvases, executed during the height of the “Washington Color School,” that glorious moment in American painting born in Washington, DC in the late 1950s and 1960s, constitute a singular and important body of work in twentieth century art. With the perspective of hindsight, Downing’s elegant “circle/dot” compositions are seen to rival those of his great teacher, Morris Louis, and his better-known peer, Kenneth Noland. This presentation gave us an opportunity to rediscover, and savor, the gorgeous and challenging work of this artist whose reputation is undergoing a major revision.

KATEŘINA VINCouroVÁ: ARTERIA
Curated by Karina Kottová

Czech artist Kateřina Vincourová focused on the fragile nuances of interpersonal relations played out in time and space. The exhibition Arteria thus became a large-scale spatial drawing, rather than a collection of individual artworks. The personal is political for Vincourová, who intersects her minimalistic compositions with textiles or household objects, highlighting both the emotional charge of their individual components, and our ability to observe them from a distance.

BRIAN DAILEY: WORDS

Brian Dailey’s multi-screen video installation Words presented the artist’s six-year investigation into the relationship between language, culture, and national identity and the challenges we face in our efforts to communicate key concepts across linguistic boundaries and national borders in the age of globalization. Dailey saw Words as the creative summation of his global experiences, spanning 80 countries, compelling viewers to come to terms with the unstable relationship between language and concept, between interpretation and meaning.

KUMO: MIYA ANDO
Curated by Aria Gannon

Miya Ando’s artwork ranged from monochrome to subtle color palettes, offering a glimpse of the immense calming energy of the infinite. Ando created an immersive work that engaged the viewers, bringing nature to mind, reminding the viewers of their own connection to, and place within, nature and nature’s cycles. Her works brought attention to the fragility, the deep power and the uncompromising force of nature via experiential art installations which created environments of reflection and wonder. Distinctive in her highly adept presentation of subtle realities, Ando’s work has given her an international reputation as one of the most innovative working artists.

JIHA MOON: DOUBLE WELCOME, MOST EVERYONE’S MAD HERE

Jiha Moon’s works addressed the intersection of imagery native to Korea, Japan, and China and elements of the West in order to explore cross-cultural perceptions. Originally from Korea and presently based out of Atlanta, Georgia, Moon’s work presented our current global identity as influenced by popular culture, technology, racial perceptions, and folklore. By melding the artistic traditions and iconic imagery of both East and West, Moon’s work explored ideas of both the foreign and the familiar. This exhibition was presented as part of the Visiting Artist Program organized by AU Studio Art.

ENTANGLEMENT: CAROL BROWN GOLDBERG

Carol Brown Goldberg’s exhibition Entanglement offered vivid evidence of her artmaking as the convergence of intellect, emotion, and technique. Her paintings in the exhibition—marked by images of dense, imagined foliage—were rooted in a unique interplay of tightly packed philosophical concepts and more ethereal poetic imaginings.
FRANCISCO TOLEDO: TOLEDO MÚLTIPLE
Curated by Fernando Gálvez de Aguinaga
As Mexico's most prolific and influential graphic artist, Francisco Toledo has been exploring the fantastical and expanding the expressive range of his printmaking over more than 50 years. This exhibition encompassed a wide range of Toledo’s work, revealing the progression and creative process evidenced in his printmaking. The exhibition also included 21 works by both Mexican and foreign printmakers as part of Toledo’s collection for the Instituto de Artes Graficas de Oaxaca (IAGO). These works have been influential in developing Toledo’s creative vision and serve to contextualize the medium in a global art history.

MASTER OF FINE ART FIRST YEAR AND THESIS EXHIBITIONS
April 3-April 25 and May 5-May 27
AU's Department of Art presented a two-part exhibition featuring the work of first and second year MFA candidates working in diverse media. The first-year experience was riddled with experimentation, questioning, and transformation. Year One: A Closer Look exhibited the work of artists J’han Brady, Amanda Muhlena Hays, Sarah Jarrett, Arnaud Leclere, Sonimar Maldonado, Bryan McGinnis, Guy Miller, Veronica Salas, and Nadia Shihabi. Eight represented the culmination of two years’ work by the eight graduating members of American University's Studio Art MFA program. At the close of four semesters of experimentation, discovery, dedication, and reinvention, these artists claimed their space and purpose in an exhibition that was both an ending and a beginning. Featuring the work of Holly Trout, Tim Magenta, Tiffany Raquel, Fallon Chase, Ban Alwehaibi, Michelle Gagliano, Michelle Tangires, and Paige Stewart.

Inclusion Rider
This event featured conversation about diversity, identity, and inclusion in art organizations in the DMV area. Hosted by AU's Art Department and co-hosted by the Studio Visit and 'sindikit, this open discussion identified and examined the structures and economies that impact artists' lives.

Amanda Huron Book Talk: Carving Out the Commons
In support of the Metropolitan Policy Center, the AU Museum hosted Amanda Huron as she led a discussion on her book Carving Out the Commons: Tenant Organizing and Housing Cooperatives in Washington, D.C. Professor Huron is an assistant professor of interdisciplinary social sciences at the University of the District of Columbia, where her research focuses on housing, gentrification, the decommodification of land, and the history of Washington, D.C. In Carving out the Commons: Tenant Organizing and Housing Cooperatives in Washington, D.C., she theorizes the urban commons through examining the experiences of limited-equity co-ops in the fast-gentrifying city of Washington, D.C.
CONCERTS

MUSIC IN THE MUSEUM, the Museum’s concert series with Ensemble-in-Residence INTERFERENCE/intermedia new music collective, returned for its third season with two ambulatory concerts in the gallery. The first concert featured Russian and American Music commemorating 100 years since the Russian Revolution of 1917. The concert was sponsored by AU’s Carmel Institute of Russian Culture and History and the Contemporary Music Forum.

The second concert drew connections to the notion of process music, including minimalism, algorithmic music, and chance determination. Featuring a combination of acoustic and digital musical instruments, computer performers, and visual components, INTERFERENCE explored this terrain with a distinct intermedia focus.

The Sins in Concert
Conductor James Blachly and the Experiential Orchestra presented seven new compositions in response to William Woodward: The Seven Deadly Sins.

Alma de Cuerdas Concert
We hosted an evening of traditional Mexican music in honor of the exhibition Toledo Múltiple. The Alma de Cuerdas Ensemble was founded in 2015 by violinist Octavio Zárate. Comprised of eight professional musicians hailing from the state of Oaxaca, Mexico, the group has developed both a national and international presence by participating in a diverse range of festivals, quartets and orchestras. The Alma de Cuerdas Ensemble is committed to fostering the arts among the youth, and to bringing the music that identifies Mexico as a nation of great cultural diversity to all regions within and outside the country.

Performing the Border
Curated by Megan Rook-Koepsel
June 17 - August 13, 2017

Where do we draw the boundary line? How do we know where one moment ends and another begins? The borders that separate people and things are constantly changing, and quite often completely arbitrary, yet the importance placed on them would seem to suggest otherwise. Featuring Washington artists Clay Dunklin, Amy Lin, Susana Raab, Jenny Wu, and Street Light Circus, the works in Performing the Border explored the concept of borders and boundaries, both the ways we perform within them, and the way those borders are often themselves a performance.

Making a Scene: Jefferson Place Gallery
Curated by John Anderson
September 5- October 22, 2017

Making a Scene marked the 60th anniversary of the opening of the Jefferson Place Gallery: a small cooperative gallery dedicated to showing the work of DC-area contemporary artists of the late 1950s. Founded by four American University professors and Alice Denney, the gallery would quickly evolve from extension of AU faculty's pedagogy, to an early supporter of the Washington Color School, to a host of exhibitions featuring prominent national and international contemporary art figures including Jack Tworkov, Robert Goodnough, Toko Shinoda, Robert Rauschenberg, and Jasper Johns.

The Trawick Prize
November 11 - December 17, 2017

The Alper Initiative for Washington Art celebrated an award that has become synonymous with Washington area artistic talent: The Trawick Prize for Contemporary Arts. One of the first regional competitions with the largest award that annually recognizes visual arts, The Trawick Prize was established by Carol Trawick, a longtime community activist in Montgomery County. The Trawick Prize exhibition featured new works by the “Best in Show” recipients of the award over the last 15 years: Lauren Adams, Richard Cleaver, Larry Cook, Neil Feather, Mia Feuer, Lillian Bayley Hoover, Gary Kachadourian, Maggie Michael, Jonathan Monaghan, Jiha Moon, David Page, James Rieck, Jo Smail, and René Treviño.
Frank DiPerna Retrospective
January 27 - March 11, 2018

Frank DiPerna Retrospective was a comprehensive survey of the artist's photographic work over more than forty years. Comprised of multiple bodies of work beginning in 1974 continuing through today; each project was accomplished through using the most advanced technology of the time—from black and white to color film to the classic Polaroid SX-70 to the possibility of digital color photography. The flow of work, from series to series over decades, reveals a careful eye recording and at times choreographing a changing yet consistent world transcending both time and place. Organized by Jayme McLellan.

Michael Clark: Washington Artist
April 3 - May 27, 2018

Michael Clark (a.k.a. Clark Fox) has been an influential figure in the Washington art world for more than 50 years, despite dividing his time equally between the capital and New York City. Clark was not only a fly on the wall of the art world as the last half-century played out- he was in the middle of the action, making innovative works that draw their inspiration from movements as diverse as Pop Art, Op Art, Conceptual Art, Minimalism, and the Washington Color School.

The Alper Initiative for Washington Art Book Collection

In addition to Alper exhibition catalogues, the Alper Initiative for Washington Art Book Collection offers books on the art history of Washington and the local artists that played a role in that history, as well as those making history today. The book collection is available in the Alper study space.
located in the AU Museum. All are welcome to peruse the books over a cup of coffee or tea during normal museum hours: Tuesday through Sunday, 11:00am-4:00pm.

To review the books available prior to visiting, patrons may reference the book collection Pinterest page or search the AU Library Alper Book Collection Catalog. Furthermore, anyone interested in contributing to the collection may submit a donation proposal through the book donation form on the Alper webpage.

Programming

Alper Salon Series

FREE PARKING is a series of salon-style, early evening conversations in the Alper Initiative for Washington Art space. The format of these events ensures an intimate evening of lively discussion. The salon is open to anyone interested in discussing the art and artists of the Washington Metropolitan area.

FREE PARKING: Performing the Border featured local artists whose performance-based visual art reflects on the tensions surrounding issues of immigration, border security, and international relations. Washington artists Clay Dunklin, Amy Lin, Susana Raab, Jenny Wu, and artists from Street Light Circus discussed their work with curator Megan Rook-Koepsel.

FREE PARKING: Jefferson Place Gallery featured curator John Anderson in conversation with artists and friends of the Jefferson Place Gallery—Washington’s premiere contemporary art space opened by artists in 1957.

Other Events

Gallery Talk: “Best in Show” Trawick Prize
This season’s salon-style conversation in the Alper Initiative for Washington Art took a different approach to celebrating Washington artists by recognizing the recipients of the Trawick Prize over the past 15 years. The award was established by Carol Trawick, a longtime community activist in Montgomery County.

Gallery Talk with Michael Clark
This event featured a conversation with Michael Clark, Jim Harithas, former director of the Corcoran Gallery of Art in the 1960s and current director of the Station Museum of Art in Houston, and Paul Richard, art critic for The Washington Post from 1967-2009. They discussed Clark’s paintings that both embrace and evade categorization within the sphere of contemporary art.

Drawing Tools You Can Use with Beverly Ress
Drawing Tools You Can Use with Beverly Ress returned for another 6-week session teaching the fundamentals of drawing representatively. This program is part of the Alper’s series of artist-led classes.
Two-Day Artist as Entrepreneur Program for Visual Artists
Through the support of the Stephen & Palmina Pace Foundation, New York Foundation for the Arts (NYFA) in partnership with the American University Museum (AUM) offered a free boot camp focused on the artist as an entrepreneur. The two-day-long program was customized to fit the needs of Washington DC Metropolitan-area artists. The weekend featured a blend of formal lectures, breakout sessions, and one-on-one meetings. Participants left with an “action plan,” and a blueprint for specific aspects of their practice.

Volunteer Program

Volunteer Enrichment Program 2017 –2018

The enrichment program for the volunteers consists of activities designed to increase knowledge of contemporary art and to strengthen the role of the volunteer at the Museum. These activities include exhibition tours with Director & Curator Jack Rasmussen, a lecture series on contemporary art, and educational field trips to galleries, museums, historic sites, artist studios, and private collections. The speakers for the lectures are experts in their fields and come from various museums and university disciplines.

Below is the schedule of meetings and field trips:

- May 9: Tour of Yayoi Kusama: Infinity Mirrors exhibition at the Smithsonian’s Hirshhorn Museum
- June 5: Museum Communications Part 1, Tutorial with AU Museum Marketing & Publications Specialist
- June 14: Docents’ Preview with Director and Curator Jack Rasmussen
- June 19: Exhibition training with Director and Curator Jack Rasmussen

Volunteer Run Programs

Kids@Katzen
Our Kids@Katzen program offers children from ages 5-12 and their families a unique opportunity to engage with current exhibitions and create their own works of art in a hands-on studio experience.

Early Fall: Twist-Layer-Pour
After learning about work in the group exhibition Twist-Layer-Pour, children created sculptures using everyday objects and found material.

Late Fall: Sculpting with String & Wire
Based on Tethered to the Cradle, an exhibition of sculptures by artist Christopher Carter, children used string, wire, and other materials to produce their own playful sculpture.

Inspired by the work of Washington Color School artist Thomas Downing, children created collage artworks using color, size, and shape.

Spring: Getting Tangled with Carol Brown Goldberg
Carol Brown Goldberg led the children in drawing their own botanical interpretations inspired by her Entanglement exhibition.

Tours

Volunteer docents provided tours of the exhibitions every Friday during the run of exhibitions. They also gave 18 tours upon request for university classes, community groups, and tourists.

On May 14, 2018, American University in conjunction with The Corcoran Art Gallery Board of Trustees announced the Corcoran’s gift of nearly 9,000 works of art to the American University Museum. The released statements were republished over one hundred times by national and international news outlets. In addition, numerous outlets published their own stories on the gift.

Corcoran Board of Trustees Announces One of the Largest Free Art Distributions in U.S. History; More Than 10,750 Works of Art Going to 22 Institutions in Washington

WASHINGTON--(BUSINESS WIRE)--May 14, 2018--The Corcoran Art Gallery Board of Trustees today announced that more than 10,750 works remaining in the Corcoran’s art collection will be distributed to 22 institutions across Washington in one of the largest free art distributions in U.S. history.

Today's announced distribution includes paintings, prints, drawings, sculpture, textiles, and photographs featuring internationally recognized artists such as Ansel Adams, Gene Davis, Walker Evans, Helen Frankenthaler, Sam Gilliam, Dorothea Lange, and many others.

Honoring the Board’s previously stated commitment to preserve the Corcoran legacy in Washington, 99 percent of the Corcoran’s total art collection will remain in the city. This includes today's distribution and 8,631 artworks previously accessioned by the National Gallery of Art after the Corcoran museum closed in 2014.

A complete listing of artwork and recipient organizations can be found on the Corcoran website at corcoran.org/artdistribution.

“I applaud the Corcoran Board of Trustees, who worked so diligently to honor the legacy of William Wilson Corcoran and keep the Corcoran’s art collection in Washington. Residents, students, teachers, historians, and visitors from around the world will all benefit from these artworks being kept in DC, where they will be preserved and made available for the public to enjoy,” said Washington Mayor Muriel Bowser.

Recipient organizations include local universities (American University, George Washington University, Georgetown University, Howard University, and the University of the District of Columbia); museums (Anacostia Community Museum, the National Portrait Gallery and seven other Smithsonian Institutions, The Kreeger Museum, the National Museum of Women in the Arts, The Phillips Collection and the National Gallery of Art); and locations appropriate for specific artworks, such as the Supreme Court of the United States receiving a painting of Chief Justice John Marshall.

The recipient organizations will take possession of their selected artworks in the next few months, and they only pay for packing, transportation and insurance costs. Additionally, the recipients have committed to keeping the artwork in the city for display and for student and scholarly study.

As is common with museums, approximately 80 percent of the art in the Corcoran Collection are on paper, including drawings, prints, and photographs. Many of these are unframed and safely stored until needed for an exhibition or study. The bulk of the Corcoran’s famous works on paper collection will be transferred to the American University Museum at the Katzen Arts Center where it will be preserved nearly in its entirety.

“As a proud member of the Washington Color School, I have a long history of creating and exhibiting my art in this town, and strong emotional ties to the city and its many cultural institutions. I am deeply gratified that the Corcoran’s extensive art collection, from the Color School and so many other talented artists, will remain here in DC,” said famed artist Sam Gilliam.

Of the entire Corcoran collection of 19,493 artworks, only 109 (0.6 percent of the total) are estimated to be leaving the District, including lace and other decorative work slated for the Smithsonian’s Cooper Hewitt Design Museum in Manhattan, and 17 artworks going to locations having a specific connection to the work, the artist and the Corcoran.

Distribution decisions were made by the Corcoran Board of Trustees after a multi-year process of evaluating requests submitted by institutions and organizations in Washington and nationwide. Three former Corcoran curators were hired to help evaluate these requests, and the curators operated under anonymity, so they could give candid assessments and recommendations to the Board.

“We are extremely pleased to distribute the Corcoran collection to so many worthy institutions across the city,” said Corcoran Board of Trustees Chairman Harry Hopper. “The Corcoran legacy is threefold: The school, which continues operation as part of The George Washington University, educating future generations of artists; the building, which is getting the much-needed repairs and renovation to preserve it for the future; and the Corcoran art collection, which remains in Washington to be exhibited across the city for generations to come.”

About the Corcoran Board of Trustees: The Corcoran Board of Trustees is committed to preserving the Corcoran legacy in Washington, DC through one of the largest free distributions of artwork in history. The Trustees’ distribution of the Corcoran collection will allow the artwork to be enjoyed by the public and studied by students and scholars for future generations.
Bulk of Corcoran's remaining collection headed to AU museum at the Katzen

The Washington Post, Peggy McGlone May 14

The Corcoran Gallery of Art’s board of trustees will announce Monday that it will distribute almost 11,000 works remaining in its renowned collection, a historic giveaway that includes paintings by Washington Color School artist Sam Gilliam, photographs by Ansel Adams and Dorothea Lange, and prints by 19th-century French master Honoré Daumier.

Almost 9,000 pieces will go to the American University Museum at the Katzen Arts Center, with others headed to 10 Smithsonian Institution museums, several universities and the U.S. Supreme Court.

The distribution marks the final stage of the dismantling of the famed Washington institution. Under a controversial 2014 deal, the National Gallery of Art had first dibs on the entire collection and ended up acquiring about 40 percent of the 19,493 works. George Washington University gained control of the museum’s independent school and its two historic buildings, including the Flagg Building on 17th Street NW.

“Having three anchors, where the bulk of the collection legacy of the Corcoran could be accessed, seemed like a great balance,” said Corcoran board chairman Harry F. Hopper III.

The artwork given to American University represents the largest piece of the Corcoran holdings and is a “once-in-a-lifetime opportunity,” said Jack Rasmussen, director and curator of the American University Museum at the Katzen. American is in the process of finalizing the acquisition.

The Corcoran works, Rasmussen said, complement the university's focus on contemporary art and Washington artists. The major gift raises the national profile of the largest university-affiliated museum in the region.

“The Corcoran was the center of the art world in Washington, and the center of gravity has come over here a bit,” he said. “We have the facility and the interest in Washington. The Corcoran legacy is our legacy, too. It’s Washington's legacy.”

The National Gallery acquired more than 8,000 pieces in 2015, including significant works by - Albert Bierstadt, Frederic Edwin Church, Cy Twombly and Jenny Holzer, transforming its holdings of contemporary art, photography and American paintings.

In 2016, the Corcoran released a list of the remaining work to Washington institutions and encouraged them to make selections. Three independent curators reviewed the requests and offered recommendations, and the Corcoran board made the final decisions.

Hopper said the board was painstaking in its effort to match the works with the institutions and is donating pieces to all the organizations that asked. It is sending works to every corner of the city — from the Anacostia Community Museum in Southeast to the Kreeger Museum in Northwest — and to Georgetown and Howard universities and the University of the District of Columbia.

“The institutions had to have the capability of receiving them and being good custodians, and to not only exhibit them, but to make the works accessible,” Hopper said.

George Washington University was offered about 800 works, second behind American University. Included are works of historical interest, including a portrait of founder William Wilson Corcoran and a trowel that was used to set the cornerstone of the Flagg Building, said Kym Rice, assistant director for academic affairs at the Corcoran School of the Arts and Design.

“It’s a very generous and important gift to us,” she said. “It matches a lot of the strengths of GW.”

The Smithsonian American Art Museum has been offered about 320 works, including prints and graphic works by Puerto Rican artists and social documentary photography, which is a focus of its collection.

“It’s exciting for the city,” said SAAM curator Virginia Mecklenburg. “Anyone who does art historical research knows how important the Corcoran was. It’s bittersweet.”

Only 109 items, less than 1 percent of the total, are going to institutions outside Washington, - including 92 pieces of lace to the Smithsonian’s Cooper Hewitt Design museum in New York.

GWU is renovating the Flagg Building, which includes galleries that will be curated by the National Gallery of Art, according to spokeswoman Anabeth Guthrie. Museum staff will spend a year monitoring the environmental conditions of the galleries before installing exhibitions sometime in 2019.

Alper Initiative for Washington Art

The Alper Initiative Instagram and Facebook following continues to grow. These accounts are distinctive yet related to the AU Museum’s style as dictated by a style guide developed with the intention of creating a unique voice and appearance for the Alper online. Posts aim to be informative and neighborly, directly connecting with local artists and art organizations via social media. This past year, we have increased the number of livestreamed Alper events, promoted new artist-led classes at the Alper, and hosted our first Facebook group for a specific exhibition, Latitude: The Washington Women’s Art Center. The group brought together 80 + former members of the Center and became a resource for the exhibition.
