Columbus Junior College

Given Full Accreditation

Columbus University Junior College has been granted full accreditation by the Board of Education, under powers granted in the last week by Congress, it was announced by the university today.

Today's approval means that the Junior College, rounding out its second year, becomes a fully accredited institution. In addition to being able to meet the general requirements of the District Court of Appeals, the Junior College will now be allowed to grant the title of Associate in Arts for 60 semester hours of college training, or three years of evening sessions.

The law under which the board granted the accreditation provides that approval by the board shall have the same force and effect as certification by the various state departments of education. Columbus was the first local institution to be so approved.

January 18, 1942

George Washington University has acquired the 70,000-volume library of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Eberl Beck Marvin, university president, announced last night.

Dr. Marvin revealed the purchase of the library, valued at $500,000 at the university's commencement exercises in Constitution Hall, where degrees were conferred on 1451 students.

In an address to the graduates the president also announced the gift of funds for a new engineering and technological building, to cost $500,000. The donors are Charles H. Tompkins, Washington, D.C., and the library and the new engineering building were listed by Dr. Marvin as part of a program of university expansion amounting in more than three million dollars. The program includes a previously announced $400,000 classroom building, purchase of land for a parking lot at a cost of $500,000, and the $650,000 Waywark Memorial Building for the study of cannon, given by the Washington Home for Poultringers.

The university acquired the Carnegie Library, considered one of the best in the country on international law and relations, after negotiations between Dr. Marvin and Dr. James T. Shotwell, president of the Carnegie Endowment.

The library now is housed in the endowment's headquarters at 700 Jackson pl. nw. It had been expected that the books would be transferred to New York City when the endowment moves into new quarters adjacent to the United Nations Building.

Dr. Shotwell said that in making the decision to leave the library

Washington Law College
Registration

Washington College of Law announces that registrations are now being received for the fall term which opens on Wednesday, September 17.

The college, which begins its forty-sixth academic year at this time, is on the list of approved schools of the American Bar Association and offers a curriculum exclusively of law subjects. A three-year course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Laws is available for students who desire a wide and varied teaching experience, as well as a number of part-time instructors, local practicing attorneys and Government officials, whose educational background and practical experience make them valuable members of the staff.

Dean Grace Hays Riley announces that special courses in administrative law and taxation will be offered during the coming semester. Administrative law, which will cover a study of the problems in government administration, including administrative procedure and judicial control, is to be taught by Prof. Frederick A. Ballard. The subject of taxation will be under the direction of James Craig Peacock, and will deal with the legal problems presented by the tax system.

Mr. Peacock, a member of the firm of Williams, Myers and Quigley, was formerly a tax expert with the Advisory Board in the United States Treasury Department.

Washington College of Law
Beginning Its 46th Fall Term

Washington College of Law will begin its forty-sixth fall term with the opening of classes in all divisions on Wednesday, September 17. Registrations have been received during the past week and will also be accepted throughout the coming week. The returning upper classes, as well as the entering students, will be greeted at the initial session by the dean of the college, Grace Hays Riley.

The college, founded in February 1896 by Dr. Ellen Sprague "Tussy" and Emma M. Gillett to give women an opportunity to study law, although always coeducational, has steadily developed until today its curriculum, faculty, library, and sound educational policy are approved by the American Bar Association.

Under a new plan for beginning students, the work on first-year subjects is concentrated in semesters, with final examinations in January and June making possible the completion of work in one semester rather than the extension of some courses throughout the year. Returning to the faculty this year as members of the full-time staff are Dr. Edwin A. Mooers, Dr. Hamilton Vreeland Jr., and Prof. Helen B. Arthur.

Part-time faculty members who will continue their teaching assignments at the college during the coming semester include the supervising library consultant, Mrs. Rebecca L. Nott, who will continue the course in legal bibliography; Dr. Roscoe J. C. Dorsey who will teach administrative relations; and Prof. J. Garfield Riley who will handle the subject of negotiable instruments. John L. Laskey will conduct the evening division class in contracts; while Michael J. Keane will teach the subject of torts.

Going to College Here This Fall...?

Washington College of Law

By Earl J. Wilson

The Washington College of Law is a monument to the efforts of two determined women who changed a curious situation when they graduated from law school in Washington during the late nineties. In 1896 women were admitted to the university and entered upon the legal profession. The nation was interested in the advancement of women’s rights and the college was founded in 1896. In 1898 Dean Grace Hays Riley was appointed as the first woman to graduate from college with a law degree. She was also the first woman to practice law in the District of Columbia. In 1903 Dean Grace Hays Riley graduated from the school herself and joined the faculty. The aim of the school was to train women for admission to the bar and to give them the opportunity to practice law. The school was co-educational from its inception in 1896. In 1908 the school was renamed the Washington College of Law. Today the school is a co-educational institution.

Rationale Interest in Women Students

Washington College of Law

Washington College of Law opened its forty-seventh fall term Wednesday. A general assembly of the returning second and third-year students, as well as the beginning students, was a feature of the opening meeting. Dean Grace Hays Riley addressed the assembly briefly. She spoke of the opportunities offered in the field of law, explained the need for the completion of subjects in one semester, and introduced the members of the full-time and part-time faculties.

An announcement has been made of a change in faculty assignments. Dr. Hamilton Vreeland, Jr., a member of the full-time staff, is now teaching the subject of domestic relations to the second-year class and the special course in administrative law.

Representatives of the college will take an active part in the program of the annual meeting of the American Bar Association, which is to be held in Indianapolis during the coming week. Wiley Buleidger, Jr., a member of the full-time staff, will teach the subject of domestic relations to the second-year class and the special course in administrative law.

Dr. Anderson Named Law Dean at Southeastern

Dr. Arthur Anderson, who received his law degree from the University of Chicago, has been named dean of the Law School of Southeastern University. He is known for his contributions to the field of law and has received several awards for his work. He is a member of the American Bar Association and the Illinois Bar Association.

Dr. Anderson started his career in law as a law clerk for the firm. He went on to become a professor at the University of Chicago, where he received a bachelor of philosophy degree in 1921, a doctor of law degree in 1923, and the degree of doctor of jurisprudence in 1925. He then continued his private practice there until 1924. Subsequently he was engaged as a law clerk with the Illinois Legislative Reference Bureau at Springfield, Illinois. From 1903 to 1930 he was assigned to the Illinois Law Department, which was responsible for the drafting of laws and the preparation of legislation. In 1930 he was appointed as assistant professor, and in 1936 he was named assistant professor. In 1939 he was made acting professor of law. He retired in 1941.

College of Law To Open 47th Year Feb. 4

Washington College of Law announces the opening of its forty-seventh year on the second semester on Wednesday, February 2, 1944, founded in 1890, by Dr. Ellen Spencer Mussey and Emma M. Gillett, the first coeducational law school in the District of Columbia. The college has developed steadily and today fulfills its original function of legal education and educational policy place in the law schools approved by the American Bar Association.

A new schedule plan for the first year's work for the course is arranged so that students may begin the study of law at this time. The first-year subjects are concentrated in each semester with final examinations in January and June rather than the extension of some course throughout the year. The subjects offered for beginning students during the coming semester are criminal law, personal property, and procedure.

The course offers a three-year course for those who can devote substantially all of their time to the study of law, and a four-year course for those attending full-time.

The educational admission requirement is one-half of the work required of men members of the equivalent degree at a college or university in the District of Columbia, or a private regional accrediting agency. The credits are acceptable at the University of the District of Columbia.

In addition to the regular curricula of the professional law course, Dean Grace Hays Riles announces that special courses will be offered in the subjects of constitutional law, law and labor in federal and labor and federal trade regulation law.

Examinations to close the work of the first semester will be held on next Thursday, January 28, and will continue until Friday, January 30.
New Rent Examiners
To Begin Hearings
In About 10 Days

Will Take Oath Tomorrow,
But Must Await Approval Of Rules and Regulations

Although three examiners appointed to hear complaints under the District rent-control law will be sworn in tomorrow, it is unlikely that any cases will be heard for 10 days. Rent Administrator Bernard F. Cowgill said last night that rules and regulations governing the rent office must be approved by the District Commissioners before formal hearings can be held.

Mr. Cowgill said he had submitted the rules to Corporation Counsel Richmond Keeney, who will examine them before they go to the Commissioners. This delay will mean that landlords have raised rents only on extensively modernized and furnished apartments probably will not see the additional rent increase until February of next year. The administrator has ruled that his decision will take effect the day issued and will not become effective until 30 days later.

Salary $3,000 a Year.
The three examiners to be named by the Commissioners are J. Walter Wilson, 212 34th Street, S.W.; Leonard F. Hayes, 27 Tilden Street, N.W.; and Henry M. Fowler, 51 of 25th Street, S.W. The salary of each is to be $3,000 a year. Their selection will be in accordance with the terms of the rent control ordinance.

Justice Wiley Rutledge
To Teach Law Class

Dear Grace Hays Riley: Washington College of Law announced that the course in corporations in the evening division during the second semester will be given this year by Wiley Rutledge, associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Justice Rutledge, who is also a member of the college board of trustees, was formerly a member of the law faculties of the University of Colorado, Washington University, St. Louis, Missouri, and the State University of Iowa.

He served as dean of Washington School of Law from 1929 to 1935; as dean at the College of Law, the State University of Iowa, from 1935 to 1939, when he was nominated associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia by President Roosevelt. Justice Rutledge served as a member of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, from Missouri, 1931-35; and from Iowa, 1936 to the present time.

Full-time faculty members who will continue with the college are Dr. Edwin A. Moores, Dr. Hamilton Tredwell, Jr., and Prof. Helen B. Arthur.

Washington College of Law
Announces New Subjects

Washington College of Law will begin its 4th year with the opening of the second semester next Wednesday, when new subjects will start in all classes.

New hours for the evening division will go into effect. Classes in this division will begin at 5 p.m., one hour later than formerly, to permit Government employees to attend the evening extensions of half-credit courses.

An addition to the faculty for this semester is Alexander Holodof, special assistant to the Attorney General, who will teach Federal civil procedure to the third-year evening class. Mr. Holodof is a specialist in this subject, having written the book "Federal Civil Procedure," with the co-operation of the committee in charge of the drafting of these new rules of procedure. He has lectured on Federal rules of civil procedure before the Boston Bar Association and is the author of another book, "New Federal Procedure and the Courts," published by the American Bar Association, and co-author of "Federal Procedure in Practice."

Among the special courses which will be offered during the second semester is the subject of International law, with special emphasis on war problems. This will be taught by Dr. Hamilton Tredwell, Jr., a member of the full-time staff.

Mrs. Elizabeth Keith
Dies at Home Here

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Keith, wife of Arthur Keith, who was with the Geological Survey for about 40 years, died yesterday at her home, 2210 Tenth Street N.W.

Mrs. Keith, a native of New York City, attended Denver College for Women, and the Washington College of Law, from which she received a law degree in 1917 and a master's degree in 1922. She is a former dean of the Kayna Beta Phi legal sorority.

Mrs. Keith worked at the Geological Survey until her marriage to Mr. Keith in 1918, and accompanied her husband on many of his geological trips, particularly to Canada and New England. She was on the Women's Board of Trinity College for a number of years.

Services will be held at 10 a.m. tomorrow at St. Paul's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Oaklawn Cemetery, Quincy, Mass.
Washington College of Law Begins 47th Year Wednesday

Washington College of Law will begin its forty-seventh year with the opening of the second semester next Wednesday, when new subjects will start in all classes.

At this time the new hours for the evening division became effective. Classes in the evening division will be held from 6:10 to 8:00 p.m., one hour later than previously, to permit students and working men to attend.

An addition to the faculty for this semester is Alexander Holstoff, special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States, who is teaching the subject of Federal civil procedure to the third-year law class.

Mr. Holstoff is a specialist in this subject, having worked in close cooperation with the committees in the drafting of these new rules of procedure. Since their publication he has lectured on them before the Boston Bar Association, and is the author of numerous articles and books on the subject. He is at present interpreting the new rules of procedure. This course in Federal civil procedure is given by Prof. David G. Bress, who is the author of the textbook used in the United States Navy.

Another addition to the faculty for this semester is the Hon. Wiley W. Rutledge, associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Mr. Rutledge is the third judge of corporations in the second-year evening division.

Pastime at Washington College is also a member of the college board of directors, the law faculty of the University of the District of Columbia, St. Louis, Mo., and the State University of Iowa.

Mr. Rutledge has been Dean of Washington College of Law since 1925, and Dean at the College of Law, the State University of Iowa, from 1925 to 1938, when he was nominated as associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia by President Roosevelt.

Full-time faculty members who are returning for the academic year are: Prof. Holmes E. Arthur, Dr. Mooney teaching the course in Constitutional Law; Dr. W. C. Atkinson, teaching the course in Evidence in the evening division and the subject of the evening proceedings in the day division. Subjects assigned to Dr. Atkinson include criminal law, civil law and constitutional law. Professor Atkinson specializes in the field of evidence, and has written a text on the subject of evidence of personal property, real property and trusts.

Washington Law College Cancels Annual Banquet

The Board of Trustees of Washington College of Law has canceled the banquet scheduled for Saturday, this banquet, an annual affair in celebration of the founding of the college, is omitted this year because of the prostration of student finances and its other activities.

At the recent annual meeting of the Musky Law Congress, an extracurricular organization devoted to the oral argument ofappeals, the following officers were elected:

Ernie D. Goss, chairman; Calvin M. Cook, vice-chairman; Marion M. Parrish, secretary; and W. W. Leney, ex-officio, censor. The Executive Committee is composed of the above officers and the following members appointed by the trustees: Charles Bryson, A. C. McKown, Jesse E. Swain.

Other committees appointed by Mr. Goss include: Membership and promotion: Mr. Nelson, chairman; Mr. William J. Davis, masque; Marion M. Parrish and Mr. Swain; case assignments: Mr. Cory, chairman; Mr. Swain, clerk; alumni and court and speakers: W. W. Leney, chairman; Clara L. Longstreth, and Mr. Goss.

Washington Law College Alumni Plan Spring Rally

The Alumni Association of Washington College of Law will hold its spring rally Saturday at 10 a.m. in the college building, 200 G Street, N.W. The board of trustees and faculty, and all alumni and students of the college, are cordially invited to attend and join in the program.

There will be entertainment, including specialties by members of the alumni, music for those who wish to dance, and refreshments will be served. Bridge enthusiasts will have an opportunity to play. Everything will be informal—no speeches—all that is required is to sign the roll showing attendance.

The committee on arrangements includes Georgina Binger, Pauline Cook, Jeanine Gaines, Marion Gosch, Mrs. Lorraine Hursey, Roma Medford, Margaret McMahon, Elizabeth Salomak, Mrs. Myrtle Sherill, Mrs. Mary Witternberger, William J. Chillcomb, Earl Deery, J. August Johnson, George McKean, Edwin Moots, Jr., Smith Blair, Jr., and J. Warren Wilson.

Law College's 25 Graduates Pass Bar Quiz

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Medford of Washington College of Law are the parents of Mr. Medford's daughter, Rome Frances, to Frederick Wharry Turpen, of Mobile, Ala., and Washington, son of Mr. Turpen's parents, E. and Marie E. Turpen, of Mobile.

The bride-elect has been active in trade association work for a number of years and is assistant secretary of the National Association of Women Lawyers in this city. She is a graduate of local schools and received her B.A. degree from the Washington College of Law, of which institute she is now secretary of the board of trustees.

Mr. Turpen attended Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn and received degrees from the Benjamin Franklin University and the Washington College of Law, both located in Washington. He is a member of Sigma Nu Phi Fraternity and has been admitted to practice before the bar of the District Court of the United States and Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia. Mr. Turpen, an employee of the General Accounting Office, is at present on duty as a member of the Naval Reserve.

No date has been set for the wedding.
Holtzoff Will Be Member
Of New D. C. Appeals Court

Six Appointments
In Prospect Under
Merger Law

By J. A. FOX.

Alexander Holtzoff, for nearly 18 years special assistant to the Attorney General, will be a member of the appellate tribunal to be set up under new legislation merging Police and Municipal Courts here and providing for an intermediate appeals court. At a pass on appeals from the reconstituted bench, it was learned yesterday.

It has not been decided if he will be designated as chief justice of the three-man tribunal, it was said in informed quarters.

Six appointments are in prospect under the court merger law, but

ALEXANDER HOLTZOFF

Mr. Holtzoff is the only definite one. He was understood.

In addition to the three places on the appeals court, there will be a chief judge named also for the merged court, and there is a vacancy to be filled as the result of the death of Chief Judge George C. Atkam of Municipal Court. Municipal Judge Robert E. Mattingly is expected to be named.

Candidates for Chief Judge.

For the post of chief judge of the merged court, it was said, there are two leading candidates—Judge Nathan C. Green of Municipal Court and Judge Walter J. Casey of Police Court. That an outsider may get the place, however, is a possibility.

The chief judge of the appeals court carries a salary of $9,000, while the associates will receive $6,500. The chief judge of the merged court is to receive $9,500, with the salaries of his nine associates unchanged at $6,000. Terms will be for ten years; instead of the six and four, respectively, now served by incumbents in Police and Municipal courts.

Mr. Holtzoff was born in New York City, November 7, 1886, and was graduated from Columbia University in 1908, and from the law school of the institution three years later. He engaged in private practice in New York until 1916—interrupted only by Army service in the First World War—and during his last three years there was State Veterans Compensation Commissioner.

Holtzoff Appointed in 1934.

Appointed special assistant to the Attorney General in October, 1934, his first assignment in the Justice Department was as the Taxation Section which had charge of civil actions arising out of the World War. In 1918 he was assigned as counsel for the United States in arbitrations with Germany on patent claims flowing from the war. His work took Mr. Holtzoff frequently into the Court of Claims as Government counsel and helped represent the Government in the extensive litigation involving the challenging of the constitutionality of P. W. A. laws for the construction of municipal power plants.

When the President's Committee on Economic Security which had the groundwork for enactment of the Social Security Act in 1935 was set up, Mr. Holtzoff was designated as the alternative on the committee for Attorney General Cummings.

He was also a member of the Attorney General's Committee which framed the bill creating the Administrative Office of the United States Courts and is now a member and secretary of the Advisory Committee of the Supreme Court, which is engaged in drafting Federal rules of criminal procedure.

Mr. Holtzoff is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, the American Bar Association and the Federal Bar Association. He is married and resides at 2601 Sixteenth Street N.W.

College of Law Class
To Hear Dr. Marshall

The baccalaureate sermon for the 1942 graduating class of Washington College of Law will be held next Sunday, June 8, at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. Dr. Marshall, rector of the church, will deliver the sermon.

The services will be preceded by an academic procession into the chapel. Members of the college Board of Trustees, the faculty and candidates for degree will attend the services in a body in academic attire. Arrangements are under the direction of John J. O'Keefe, president of the graduating class, assisted by a committee composed of Walter P. Chalkworth and Miss Margaret M. Parrish.

The Board of Trustees will hold its annual meeting Tuesday at the college to authorize the conferring of degrees upon the candidates for degrees in course.

Commencement week activities will begin on Saturday evening when the graduates of the Alumni Association at a reception held at the home of Dean Riley at 1738 N. Street Northwest. Many alumni of the college, members of the board of trustees and faculty, as well as the student body were among those attending. Wayne H. Smith, president of the Alumni Association, joined with the other officers of the association in welcoming the guests.

The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered tonight at 8 o'clock at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Peter Marshall, D.D., pastor of the church.

Rehearsal for commencement will be held on Thursday evening at the hall. Dene H. Blackwelder, who is vice president of the college with the class of 1932, will serve as master of ceremonies and chairman of the reception committee. He will be assisted by representatives of each of the classes at the college.
Washington College of Law Will Confer Degrees on 22 Thursday

The forty-fourth annual commencement of Washington College of Law will be held next Thursday at 8 p.m. in D. A. R. Memorial Hall. The speaker will be Ricardo J. Alfaro, one of the founders of the American Institute of International Law. Dr. Alfaro was formerly President of Panama and served for many years as Panamanian Minister to the United States.

Dean Grace Hays Riley will preside and will confer the degree of bachelor of laws on 22 candidates. Prizes for outstanding scholastic work will be presented by Professor J. Edward Burness Jr.

Commencement week activities began last evening when the graduates were the guests of the Alumni Association at a reception held at the home of Dean and Major Riley at 1738 N. NW. Many alumni of the college, members of the board of trustees and faculty, as well as the student body were among those attending. Wayne H. Smith, president of the Alumni Association, joined with the other officers of the association in welcoming the guests.

The baccalaureate service will be held tonight at 8 o'clock at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church by the Reverend Peter Marshall, D.D., pastor of the church.

The rehearsal for commencement will be held on Tuesday evening at the hall. Duke H. Blackwelder, a graduate of the college with the class of 1936, will serve as master of ceremonies and chairman of the reception committee.

Washington College of Law graduates received bachelor of laws degree last night at commencement exercises in Memorial Continental Hall. Class Heaps

Former Head Of Panama

Ricardo J. Alfaro, former President of Panama, and for many years Panamanian Minister to the United States, last night told the graduating class of the Washington College of Law, and several hundred guests at the forty-fourth annual commencement exercises of that institution, that "there is, and there can be, no real neutrality on this side of the Atlantic." He expressed his conviction that:

"The present position of Argentina and Chile is anomalous, because those countries would surely be treated as enemies by the Axis, if the Axis should ever gain the upper hand. . . . The overwhelming majority of the peoples of Argentina and Chile are not only anti-Axis, but are out of sympathy with the foreign policies of their own governments."

Dr. Alfaro was optimistic about the long-term benefits to derive from the recent Rio conference, along with the efforts of the Argentine-Gramercy treaties. He expressed the hope that the axis will not gain the upper hand.

Secrecy Resigns House Seat For Active Service in Navy

Representative Robert T. Secrecy, Democrat, of Ohio wore his new Navy uniform and lieutenant commander's insignia as he left yesterday to go on active duty.

By WILL P. KENNEDY.
Representative Secrecy, Democrat, of Ohio left the Capitol yesterday as the first member of Congress to accept payment of their salaries as Congress is in recess. He said the amount they have been paid for their services in the armed forces. Five of the veterans had already accepted payment. Two of them now are prominent in the Senate—Carl Hayden of Arizona, who served as a major of infantry, and Tom Connally of Texas, who was a captain and adjutant and had previously been an enlisted man in the Spanish-American War. The other three who did not accept were Marvin Jones of Texas, now judge of the Court of Claims, and for many years chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, the late Representative John J. Rogers of Massachusetts, who enlisted as a private and after his return was chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee and whose widow, Mrs. Edna Nourse Rogers, has been serving in his seat since his death in 1935, and the late Representative Albert Johnson who was a captain in the chemical warfare service, and formerly a Washington D.C. and Washington newspaper editor and publisher.

Three of the Congress veterans of the World War accepted the "back pay" to a total of $57,000, and one of them received more than $11,000.

Other World War Veterans.

There are other prominent in Congress today who served in the World War, including Senator Millard Tydings of Maryland, who rose through the ranks from enlisted man to lieutenant colonel, and was elected by Gen. Pershing, Morton and Upton, Maj. A. L. Binkley of North Carolina, acting Speaker of the House during E. C. Clark of Missouri, commissioned at the First Officers' Training Camp at Port Mears, who was chairman of the Paris caucus which organized the American Legion, one of the 17 charter members and incorporators, and Representative Jere Cooper of Tennessee, who was a captain in the infantry overseas and served in the heated engagements in France and Belgium; Representative Charles I. Faddis, Pennsylvania, who saw service in all major offensive in France and rose to the rank of colonel; Representative J. Hamilton Fish, New York, who served overseas.
authorized payment of their salaries as Congressmen, less the amount they had received for their services in the armed forces. Five of the veterans declined to accept pay- ment. Two of them now are prominent in the Senate—Carl Hayden of Arizona, who served as a major of infantry, and Tom Connally of Texas, who was a captain and adjutant and had previously been an enlisted man in the Spanish-American War. The other three did not accept were Marvin Jones of Texas, now judge of the Court of Claims and for many years chairman of the House Agriculture Committee; the late Representative John J. Rogers of Massachusetts, who enlisted as a private and whose widow, Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, has been serving in his seat since his death in 1932, and the late Representative Albers Johnson who was a captain in the chemical warfare service, and formerly a Washington, D.C. and Washington State newspaper reporter and editor.

Three of the Congressmen serving in the World War accepted the back pay of a total of $7,000, and one of them received more than $11,000. Two of these men are now dead; another is now a member of the New York State legislature. The third man is in the third man.

Other World War Veterans

There are others prominent in Congress today who served in the World War, including Representative Henry A. Tude of Maryland, Representative Robert Byrnes of North Carolina, acting Speaker Edward J. Clark of Missouri, commissioned at $1,300, and Representative Fort Myer, who was chairman of the Paris concert which organized the American Legion, one of the 17 charter members and incorporators. Representative Thomas H. Reed, who is a member of the House Committee on Ways and Means, was a captain in the Marine Corps in World War, and has had the rank of colonel in the reserves; Representative James E. Van Zandt, who had two years over in the Army, was a Marine Corps aviator with the rating of chief quartermaster, and who is now assigned as lieutenant, senior grade.

Representative Graham A. Barden of North Carolina, who succeeded Mr. Carter Glass, chairman of the House Library Committee, served in World War I as a captain and was commissioned at $1,300. He is completing eight years of continuous service.
Washington College of Law Opens Sept. 16

Washington College of Law announces that registrations are now being received for the fall term which opens on Wednesday, Sept. 16.

The college, which begins its fourth academic year, is provisionally approved by the American Bar Association. Under its new program, a curriculum exclusively of law subjects. A four-year course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Laws is maintained for students unable to devote their entire time to law study, and evening and rotation division are held from 6:10 to 8 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The faculty is composed of four full-time members of wide teaching experience, who have spent the entire time to the school. The faculty also includes a number of part-time professors, lecturers, and Government officials, whose educational background and practical experience make them valuable members of the staff.

On the curriculum for the fall term, Dr. Leonard B. Breton, LL.D., president of the college, will confer with students.

Beutel, Drohan On Washington Law Faculty

Washington College of Law has added its forty-seventh year last Wednesday when the beginning of classes for the first semester. The entering class, marking on the four-year course, together with the returning upper classes were greeted by the dean of the college, Grace W. Blackwell, at the opening session.

Among the faculty changes is the appointment of Dr. Frederick R. Beutel as professor of Negligent Instruments. Dr. Beutel is an outstanding authority in this field of law and is the author of a book on the subject. He is a lawyer of wide experience, having served on the law faculties of Tulane University, Louisiana State University and the College of William and Mary. At the present time he is on leave from the College of William and Mary serving on the legal staff of the Alien Property Custodian. In the latter capacity he holds the degree of Bachelor of Arts from Cornell University, Bachelor of Laws and Doctor of Juridical Science from Harvard University.

Another addition to the faculty at this time is Franklin R. Drohan, head of the departmental personnel at Bureau of Ships in the Navy Department.
More Recruits Are Needed for the women's army auxiliary corps, so two recently commissioned officers are in Denver to seek women qualified for this special service. Every woman who enlists in this corps releases a man for service with the fighting forces. The two Waac officers are shown reporting to Col. Thomas N. Gimpeling, head of the U. S. army recruiting office here.

WAAC OFFICERS SEEK DENVER RECRUITS SO MEN CAN GO TO FRONT

Every recruit for the women's army auxiliary corps means another man on the fighting front, and in order to stimulate interest in the organization two attractive officers of the corps are in Denver. They are Mrs. Marcella McCue and Miss Bernice Woodward. Both were commissioned as third officers on Sept. 12 at Fort Des Moines. They will spend sometime in this area seeking recruits for the training school.

Miss Woodward is a native of London, Ky., and practiced law in Washington, D. C., after she received her degree in law from the Washington Law college. She was associated with four brothers for several years and was attached to the department of agriculture prior to enlisting in the Waacs.

Mrs. McCue is the wife of Pvt. George E. McCue, stationed at Fort Logan. She taught school in Midwest, Wyo., nine years. Her home is in Greeley, Ga. She is a graduate of the Iowa State Teachers college and took educational work at the University of Iowa and the University of Colorado.

"The Waacs want quality, not quantity, for service," Mrs. McCue said. "There are enough well educated, physically fit women in this country to overtax the training quarters of the Waacs. Our job is to get these recruits."

The two women will address clubs and specially arranged meetings of women who are interested in the Waacs.
Five Phi Delta Delta Chapters to Celebrate Founder's Day

Five chapters of Phi Delta Delta will participate in the founder's day celebration to be held tonight at a dinner meeting at the Suburban Club.

Alpha Delta Chapter of Baltimore will be honored by the four Washington chapters. Miss Helen Elizabeth Brown of Baltimore will be toastmaster.

Mrs. Robert E. Freer is chairman of arrangements and will be assisted by members of her committee, including Miss Emma Robertson, president of Alpha Delta Chapter; Miss Dorothy Dunn, president of Beta Chapter; Mrs. Julia Borton Hopkins, president of Beta Chapter; Mrs. Martha Simpson, secretary, president of Alpha Lambda Chapter, and Mrs. Frederick M. Ellin, president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter.

Also assisting are Miss Frances E. Hildebrand, Mrs. Marion Goss, secretary, Mrs. Russell Hazry, Mrs. L.enea E. de Brou, Mrs. Var-e, Missie DeWitt and Miss Grace B. Kneller.

Among those who will attend are Mrs. Mary Cox, president of Eta Chapter in Boston; Miss Ethyl Wilson, president of Delta Alumnae Chapter in Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. Virginia E. Davis, president of Eta Chapter in Columbus; Mrs. Ethel Weeks, president of Alpha Lambda Chapter in New York; Mrs. Anna McMillan, president of Alpha Lambda Chapter in New York; Mrs. Anna McMillan, president of Alpha Lambda Chapter in New York; and Mrs. Anna McMillan, president of Alpha Lambda Chapter in New York.

The reception will be held by Miss Helen Goodner, grand chairman, and will include Miss Emma Bouchard, dean of Province II; Mrs. Anna Moulton, president of Eta Alumnae Chapter; Miss Ethel Ritters, president of Eta Alumnae Chapter; Miss Ethel Ritters, president of Eta Alumnae Chapter; and Miss Ethel Ritters, president of Eta Alumnae Chapter.

W. C. L. to Offer Course in Military Law

Opening the second semester Tues-
Law College 47 Years Old

Washington College of Law announces the second semester on Wednesday, February 1, 1896, by Dr. Ellen Spencer Mussey and Emma M. Gillett as the first sister law school in the District of Columbia. The college has developed steadily and today its curriculum, faculty, library and educational policy has won it provisional approval by the American Bar Association.

To meet war conditions all subjects are concentrated in each semester with final examinations in January and June rather than the extension of some courses throughout the year. Subjects offered for beginning students during the coming semester are criminal law, personal property and procedure. All or any one of them may be undertaken. Advanced work will cover courses in real property, corporations, constitutional law, as well as taxation, administrative and labor law. Criminal law will be taught by John L. Lesker assistant United States District attorney. The course in real property will be given by Prof. Helen B. Arthur, full-time staff, while Dr. Edwin A. Moore will teach corporations and procedure.

The course in administrative law will be conducted by Dr. Frederick K. Benckler, former professor of law at Northwestern University, Tulane University, Louisiana State University and the College of William and Mary. At present he is on leave from the College of William and Mary serving on the legal staff of the Alien Property Custodian.

Federal civil procedure will again be given by Alexander Hollands special assistant to the Attorney General.

The subject of taxation will be given by the professor of law at William and Mary College, formerly a tax expert for the United States Treasury Board.

Government Law Course Offered At Local College

Washington College of Law opened its second semester for the 1943-44 school year on Wednesday. In addition to important classes in taxation, military law and international law, unusual interest is being shown in the special course in Government law announced by Dean Grace Hays Riley as a contribution to the Government in its war activities.

The course is designed to assist the large number of lawyers recently drafted from private practice to engage in the work of war agencies who are not versed in the rules of law peculiarly applicable to Government matters. It will briefly cover the structure and function of various departments and independent agencies, the laws relating to personnel, Government contracts, claims against the Government. Federal criminal prosecutions and other topics of immediate interest. The course will be conducted by a member of the faculty who has had experience in the field. The lectures will be given at 8:30 a.m., beginning Tuesday and admission will be without charge.

Washington Law College To Open 48th Year

Washington College of Law will open its 48th year with the beginning of the second semester on Wednesday, February 3, 1943, by Dr. Ellen Spencer Mussey and Emma M. Gillett as the first co-ed law school in the District of Columbia. The college has developed steadily and today its curriculum, faculty, library and educational policy has won it provisional approval by the American Bar Association.

To meet war conditions all subjects are concentrated in each semester with final examinations in January and June rather than the extension of some courses throughout the year. New Supreme Court Justice Is Good Copy Despite Himself

People Are Hobby Of Wiley Rutledge
Of Kentucky and Iowa

By Patricia Grady

He’s been sitting in a swivel chair behind the Supreme Court bench for two whole days now, but he’ll never get over feeling slightly uncomfortable in the black robe of a justice.

Wiley Blount Rutledge, Jr., who recently moved his legal tastes from the Circuit Court here to the awesome Supreme Court Building, has the simple charm and quiet dignity of the “typical” American. This ruggedly built Kentuckian, who was twice before runner-up for appointment to the Nation’s highest bench, is self-styled “poor newspaper copy.” Almost shy of the press, he feels too many public utterances are unbecoming to a member of the judiciary.

RUTLEDGE GLEANINGS —
His football and baseball enthusiasms put him in the “fan” class ... Was a sandlot baseball star in his extreme youth ... Wears conservative clothes and does his own shopping ... Believes in moderation in most things, including drinking, but is a total abstainer when it comes to bridge ... His softly slurred speech gives away his Kentucky birthplace ... Walking is his only exercise ... Tries to get seven hours sleep a night ... People are his hobby ... Reading is his favorite relaxation.

A scholar by nature, the new justice spends most of his spare time reading. Biographies and histories line his bookcases. Legal minds such as Pound, Benjamin Cardozo and Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr. have greatly influenced his thinking. Pragmatist John Dewey is his favorite philosophical reading. His heroes in American history are Jefferson, Franklin, and other spokesmen for social justice.

Off-the-Cuff Is His Style

Justice Rutledge has a reputation for being an extreme liberal and is openly more interested in human welfare than in the cold abstractions of the law. He often asks, “Of what good is the law if it does not serve human needs?” His definition of democracy is a “system of limited and responsible freedom,” and a perpetual compromise, ever shifting in its major incidence upon particular human interests, between security and change.

An excellent “off-the-cuff” speaker, Justice Rutledge enjoys talking to informal audiences in the White House. His preparedness is remarkable and his ability is impressive. He has a talent for persuading his audience that he has something to say. He likes the changing reactions of an audience and admits that radio speeches make him slightly nervous.

The new judicial status of Wiley Rutledge has as yet had no visible effect on the life of

William R. Arthur Dies:
Dean of Law College

William R. Arthur, Jr., 39-year-old son of Mrs. Helen Arthur Adair, dean of the Washington College of Law, died Sunday night in Boulder, Colo., where he made his home, it was learned here today.

Mr. Arthur was a native of Boulder and served in the Army during World War II.

On March 8 of this year both Mr. Arthur and his sister were admitted to practice before the Supreme Court.

In the addition of Mrs. H. L. Par-

The Burleigh association, which Mrs. Parkinson serves as chairman of the Law, Legislation and Zoning Committee, was started, she said, when they moved to the neighborhood about 3 or 4 years ago. It has small attendance at meetings, but a good many members. During the years there have been some fights, but they are so far behind Mrs. Parkinson said she saw "no reason for digging up dead cats.

But she did want to go on record very definitely in praising the Allen Dwelling Authority for changing its name to the National Capital Housing Authority.

"It was mistrained an should have been changed before," she declared.

Referring to the student project at Western High School, she pointed out that the project has something to do with others.

At present, Mrs. Parkinson is very much interested in the fight for the Walker bill to provide for a delegate to the House from the District. She is a member of the District Delegate Committee, headed by E. Barrett Prettyman, and of the Suffrage Committee of the National Council of Women Voters.

When asked to explain why she has decided to join the committee, Mrs. Parkinson said, "That by giving our support to the bill we are not interfering with our work to day, but that we believe it will help the District to have the right to have a delegate to Congress as is represented to the District in Congress."

Speaking of the lack of interest which many members of Congress show toward the District, Mrs. Parkinson observed that on District day the District, the congressional bills are on—the same time a signal for

Rep. Rogers Gets Honorary LL.D. Degree

Representative Edith Hourse Rogers (Republican) of Massachusetts was presented with an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws by the Georgetown University Law School in Washington yesterday.

Dean Grace Hayes Riley of the college said in presenting the degree, representative Rogers has persistently fought for the protection of children, sponsored legislation improving nursing conditions and controlling cancer, worked for the armed forces, and performed outstanding service in general since she went to Congress in 1938.

Honorary degrees, the first given by the college in eight years, also were presented to Miss Maud Alton, principal of the Americanization League, and Bernard J. Gavitt, general counsel for the War Manpower Commission and former dean of Indiana University School of Law.

Gavitt, the commencement speaker, said there seems to be no serious or even latent threat of democracy in this time of war. He added he had observed “the root of any organization to destroy the legislative form of government despite change, taking in its works the ferment of various groups working for the same ideals.”

Degrees of bachelor of law were conferred on Charles J. Conover, John Wesley Austin, Minor Edwin Chamberlain, Waldo M. Johnson, Henry E. Kemper, Robert G. Medlin, Robert 0. Keuper and Willard Winter.

Grace Hays Riley Retires

Grace Hayes Riley, dean of the Washington College of Law for the last 17 years, will retire July 1 and will be succeeded by Helen B. Arthur as acting dean.

In accepting the resignation of Dean Riley, the Board of Trustees announced that she will remain with the school as aemeritus and unanimously elected her a member of the Board of Trustees.

Dean Riley was graduated from the Washington College of Law in 1908. During the World War she was administrative examiner for the War Labor Board and later was chief attorney and head of the Child Labor Tax Unit, Treasury Department, and assistant attorney for the District Rent Commission. She became dean of the Washington College of Law in 1926.

Prof. Arthur has been on the college faculty since 1939. Previously she had been a law professor at Williamette University in Salem, Ore. She has a bachelor of arts and a bachelor of law degree from the University of Colorado and master of law degree from the University of Michigan. She has taken post-graduate work at the University of London and has taught a number of subjects in the curriculum, specializing in the laws of trusts and properties.

Other members elected to the board of trustees at its recent meeting were James Craig Peacock, Maud E. Allen and Chauncey D. Snow.

D.C. Women Attorneys To Play Key Role in Lawyers' Conclave

Many From Capital to Attend Parley in Uniform of Various Services

By VILLA POE WILSON

Washington women lawyers will play an important part in the forty-fourth annual convention of the National Association of Women Lawyers to be held in Chicago August 20. Many of the women of the legal bar, members of the American Bar Association as well, so the women lawyers' convention has been arranged to precede the annual meeting of the American Bar Association.

The part that women lawyers in Washington and throughout the country are taking in the war is evidenced by the number of women who will attend the women lawyers' convention in the coming week. Among the various armed forces and volunteer organizations.

Of course Washington has reason to be proud of Capt. Mary Agnes Brown of the War, and Miss Venita Gerden of the Marine Corps Women's Reserve, who will be the chief speakers at the session devoted to "Women Lawyers in the War," and a woman lawyer in the Government and as a member of the Bar Association of the District of Columbia, who has distinguished herself in her profession and also as a leader in civic, welfare and patriotic movements.

The women of Washington in and out of the legal profession are also proud of Miss Margaretie Hauk, who achieved the highest honor in May by being elected president of the Federal Bar Association. The handsome, slender special attorney in the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue was honored before the Federal Bar Association because of her legal ability and quality of leadership.

Those voting for her were members of the bar, attorneys in the service of the United States, legislators, and members of the Quay Board and commissions. All recognize that a woman lawyer should be interested in the victory goeth without saying, for she is well known for her patriotism and, besides, in the wife of Major Harry Record of the Army Air Forces.

Miss Hauk will preside at the convention for women lawyers in Chicago as the retiring president.

The women in many clubs and organizations in Washington have been a leader in the Nation's Capital or are carrying on the work for which they are known by these early pioneers.

The influence of the late Dr. Ellen Spencer Mussey is still felt in Washington women's civic activities, as many of the leading women attorneys today wear the Mussey's "girls" and studied law with her at the Washington College of Law.

It was Dr. Mussey who fought the battle through the Supreme Court for them the privilege of attending both side of the law in an equal basis with men. Much of the work that has been accomplished has been wiped out now, but many future women lawyers remember the struggle and the younger ones have been told about them.

Burton's centers as the Women's City Club and the American Women's Club, where women lawyers have always worked for its success, including Grace Hayes Riley, dean of the Washington College of Law, who served as president of the club in post-World War Days.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cox, another former president of the D.C. Women's Bar Association, now holds the important post of corresponding secretary of the D.A.R.

Miss Alice Paili, the fiery leader of the National Woman's party and organiser of the World's Woman party, can be included in the list of Washington women lawyers of achievement.

After Miss Paili led the women's party in the suffrage campaign which resulted in the winning of the franchise for women, she decided that she must have a law degree. She entered a Washington law school and worked for a law degree in a third of the time it would take an ordinary woman.

When the war clouds are dispelled the knowledge that years of study of the legal status of women in many lands which Miss Paili has been engaged in studying for 10 or more years before the outbreak of World War II will be most valuable to those who believe that women should have an equal part and equal opportunities in plans for the post-war world.

The list of Washington women of the legal profession serving in women's organizations and holding important civic and governmental positions is a long one. It is one which will, without doubt, be included in the records of achieving women of World War II.

Your Club President

Madine Gallagher Guarantees Law Study a Sure Cure for Boredom

By Genevieve Reynolds

Worried about your husband or son in the armed forces? Weary with waiting for word that doesn't come? Or if just plain bored because time has a heavy on your hands, take a good law course. This is the advice of pretty little Edward N. Adamic, husband of Madine Gallagher, president of the Woman's Bar Association of the District of Columbia.

"If you study law you will never be bored," she said. "You will be so busy that you won't have time to worry about your own troubles."

And if you need a good injection of civic consciousness and citizenship responsibility, soft-spoken Mrs. Gallagher recommends serving on the jury, "Serving on the jury is a good eye-opener," she explained. "When taken seriously—not as curiosity satisfaction—you can't help have a social consciousness.""Generally women lawyers and judges take their voting as responsibilities. Usually they see beyond their own pole of the political system and delve into social conditions," according to Mrs. Gallagher.

College of Law Alumna

Born in Little Rock, Ark., she attended public and private school in Texas—Lilias, and this city. She was graduated from Central High School and the Washington College of Law, which was the first school in the District of Columbia to admit women. It was organized about 46 years ago because the other colleges refused to permit female students.

While living in China, she studied Far Eastern and Chinese history. She has traveled in Japan, Manchuria and Korea. In March, 1942, she attended the first conference of the Inter-American Bar Association in Havana. From time to time she has served on criminal and civil juries in the District of Columbia, criminal and civil courts.

Arranged to find his board of directors

Many women lawyers in the Latin American countries, she said that she found them remarkably young, attractive and alert.

Asked if she thought the women baristas would retain the advances made during the war, she replied: "The war has given us a break. Those that are good in the profession will remain and advance.

Keep Smiling Her Motto

While she intends to direct the Women's Bar Association's efforts in wartime channels, she plans to do it with a pleasant face and smile. When the members gather, she hopes to make each meeting a gala occasion as well as a mundane business conclave. Her philosophy is to keep smiling no matter how hard or difficult the task.

No Tyrant in the Club itself, Mrs. Gallagher is a member of the American Bar Association, International Bar Association, Phi Delta Delta (women's international) national fraternity. She took a turn as vice-president and member of the executive board of the Women's City Club.

For three years she was very active as the club's dramatic unit chairman. Also she edited the club's bulletin for six years. She is author of "Madam Juror," and "Lawyers of the Western World Center," two articles creating much favorable comment.

Helping War Effort Planned

At present active, this dynamic woman is working on survey with a committee to determine how women lawyers can best help the war effort. The first thought is to aid the servicemen and the families. All work will be voluntary.

Knee deep in committee work—she serves on about 20—Mrs. Gallagher is busy, mopping up postwar as well as war plans. All this in addition to holding down a full time job in the Federal State Relations Section of the United States Department of Justice. Somehow she managed to take a Red Cross first aid course, and assisted in distributing the second aid books. Also, she sold War Bonds and aided the war effort in other ways.

A voracious reader, she prefers history. During the winter she manages to sandwich in a few novels among her household

Robert C. Tracy, secretary of the Tax Court since 1923, whose 38 years of service marks him the oldest in that agency, is toying with the idea of writing a book when he retires, entitled “Mark From the Tomb, or With Pick and Shovel Through Federal Statutes.”

Hisopus would consist of little known items in the statutes, a subject on which he has lectured before District groups.

There is that provision, for example, which prohibits the Secretary of the Treasury from owing, in whole or in part, any sea vessel. The reason, which is another story, goes back to the founding of the Government.

There has been only one resignation of a Vice President. (John Calhoun) and none of a President, yet the law simply says either may resign by filing an instrument of resignation in writing to the Secretary of State, Mr. Tracy says.

Mr. Tracy carried a route for The Star before the turn of the century. Born in this city, he entered Federal service as a messenger in the old Patent Office, after attending Business High School. Later he was graduated in law from Washington College of Law. During the World War, he spent 18 months in Paris as an employee of the Treasury Department. For 22 years he has been recording steward of Foundry Methodist Church, and has been master, high priest and illustrious master in District Masonic organization.

Toiling in Relative Obscurity for Years, Mrs. Stiles Gets Break in Murder Trial

Makes Front Pages
Prosecuting Slayer

Although for the last five years one of U. S. Attorney Edward M. Curran's most able aids, Mrs. Grace B. Stiles toiled in relative obscurity until last week.

Then she made the front pages when she stood before a U. S. District Court jury and asked for the conviction of Jeff Henry for the murder of his estranged wife.

The spectacle of a woman handling a murder case is rare in local judicial history.

Get a Conviction
She got a second-degree murder conviction in the case and in the press she obtained a recognition long overdue for this sweet-faced grandmother, who became a lawyer for the want of something to do.

A round the courthouse, Assistant U. S. Attorney Stiles, one of the two women in that office, is known as an industrious, capable attorney in both trial and research. But since her appointment in 1939 she has been assigned to civil work which doesn't attract much public attention.

Last April she was transferred to the criminal docket and since then has handled two murder cases and numerous other felony prosecutions.

Works Quietly
In her courtroom technique she exhibits the pugnacity so loved by many barristers. This smartly-dressed Portia, whose appearance belies her 80 years, has shown by her successful record that a quiet, calm deliver of argument to a

A reluctance to fill idle hours with usual feminine pursuits led Mrs. Stiles to the study of law in 1928. Married to George Stiles, then a civil engineer and now a commander in the Navy, and the mother of one daughter, Caroline, she found legal tomes more appealing than tea.

After she received her degree from the Washington College of Law in 1933 she was immediately offered a position with George P. McCabe, attorney. After five years, he offered her a position as assistant in that U. S. Attorney's Office.

Mrs. Stiles became a grand mother two months ago when daughter Caroline became the mother of David John Levergood Jr.

She still finds recreation from legal duties in keeping house. She lives in the 4000 block Thirteenth St. NE.

Woman Tax Expert Helps Rule
On Interpretations of Laws

By JESSIE FANT EVANS

Judge Matthew Evans is one of the problems is not an insinuation woman appointed to the Board of Tax Appeals. He now the tax court of the Internal Revenue Bureau, a post in that post, from 1916-1938. Now in the chief counsel's office, she is a member of the division, which renders opinion on interpretations of the various provisions of the tax laws.

This specialist in income tax law objects to being designated as a general income tax expert, because she says, "with the number and complexities of our tax laws today, it is impossible for any one to become expert on the law, it is impossible for any one to become an expert, except in a specialized field, but she has literally grown up with the income tax laws of our Government."

When she entered Government service on March 4, 1914, by way of a competitive examination, after receiving an A. B. degree from Berea College, Gainesville, Ga., and teaching school in Georgia for five years, she was assigned to the income tax division of the Internal Revenue Bureau. The income tax returns from the 1913 income tax law were then just beginning to be filed.

Studied After Hours
In the field of legislative legal "firsts" which she has to her credit, she is also a shining example of what a civil service employee may achieve if she devotes herself to a Government career and is willing to put in long hours of extra study and professional training.

By 1921, as the result of after-hours study of her field, she had passed the LL. B. from the Washington College of Law and was admitted to the District bar.

In 1921, she was made an attorney in the division's office, where she was the first woman to be so designated. Today there are a number of women attorneys in this division, as well as in many others in the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Two Careers Possible
As to the combination, feminine home-mother and tax expert, she definitely feels that the number of women who can successfully achieve both "does not yet add up to a majority," although it is the ideal of almost every young woman just out of college to make a success of both.
Did You Happen to See---

JOHN L. LASKEY

“If you take that job with OPA, you’ll be sorry. Why, you’ll be the most unpopular man in town.” His friends told him a year ago.

Unperturbed by such dire predictions, John L. Laskey resigned as assistant District Attorney, and took the job—that of chief attorney for the District OPA office.

The red-haired young Washingtonian celebrated his first anniversary in his job last week. And storms of criticism and bitter words of scorn have yet to be heaped upon his head.

“If there ever was a straight-shooting young fellow who believes in giving a square deal, it’s Laskey,” is the comment you most often hear when his name is mentioned.

Of course, it goes without saying that John L. is the least popular in black market or with public officials or counterfeiter. Not that it bothers him in the slightest.

Ask him if those predictions of his fate on taking the job of chief attorney for OPA bothered him any, and the George Washington University law school grad smiles broadly. He’s always been fair play, and I still do,” he says. “I’ve found that even the people I’ve had to be the most severe with don’t object to doing their work if they know it’s fair,” he says quickly.

“I felt sure I’d find the job fascinating, and I have. What more, I was sure the work of seeing that OPA rules are fulfilled was important. Just take the price of potatoes, for instance. I’ve seen them for sale for 26 cents a pound, when before the war...

FREDERICK K. BEUTEL

Because he is a frank, straight man who enjoys being both candid and just a little startling, he greets you with words you rarely hear in the Capital.

“I’m just another one of those exiled college professors down here in Washington doing war work for the duration, and I don’t mind admitting it,” says Frederick K. Beutel.

Now his being a peace-time professor isn’t too surprising since Washington is filled with them. But only five of them, like his academic background—his other fear is the ridicule of the public—words. “What another long-haired theorist?”

Probably, however, Frederick Beutel will realize he may freely speak of his academic background without fear of being called a “theorist.” For he daily proves his practical ability as assistant solicitor and chief counsel of the mines division of the Department of Interior.

Moreover, he has been recognized as one of the more capable of them by some 2,500 Government workers who compose the Federal Bar Association. He was elected by them recently as editor of the Federal Bar Journal and as fourth vice president of the association.

Since this former professor of law at William and Mary College came to Washington in July of 1941, he has served with the War Labor Board, the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, the Alien Property Custodian, and in his present capacity.

Before entering Government service, he taught law at Tulane University where he was editor of the Tulane Law Review, the University of Pennsylvania College of Law Alumni Elect Board of Directors

Chinese Civilian Granted Citizenship

Mrs. Thelma Evelyn Gould Morris, 34, a clerk with the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, today became the first civilian Chinese to be naturalized in the District since the repeal of the Chinese Exclusion Act.

Mrs. Morris, who lives at 1409 Meridian place, N.W., was sworn in before Justice James W. Morris of the District Court.

"I think it is wonderful," Mrs. Morris said when asked how she liked becoming an American. She explained she had for many years wanted to be an American, but had been prevented by legislation excluding Chinese.

Mrs. Morris first came to this country in 1914, but had made visits to her native China. She has been in this country continuously since 1923, and has lived in Washington since 1930.

A total of approximately 60 people were scheduled to become citizens at the naturalization ceremony. They were told of their duties as citizens in addresses by Justice Morris and Dr. Edwin C. Dutton, president of the Washington College of Law, who represented the District Bar Association.

Society in the War Effort

WASHINGTON is a time of problem. If yours has a legal slant, Mrs. Helena D. Reed could most likely answer it. She's the Assistant District Attorney.

A leading personality in law circles for many years in the Capital City, she has handled prominent cases, too, in local women's activities. She's been president of the D. C. Bar Association; she's served as a member of the Washington College of Law Alumni Association; she's the first woman elected to the board of governors of the Washington Chapter of the American Institute of Banking; she's had many a wise word to say as a member of the District League of Women Voters; and as one of the outstanding citizens of "our town," she's served actively with the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Believing that women's work is never done—and that there will be just as many constructive jobs for them to handle in peacetime as well as now—she spreads this "gossip" of responsible preparedness in frequent talks to dissatisfied organizations throughout the city.

Dean Arthur Speaks Today At Convention

Dean Helen B. Arthur, Washington College of Law, only woman dean of a law school in the United States, will be the guest speaker at a luncheon in Hotel Claridge, in Atlantic City, today.

The luncheon has been arranged by the women members of the Pennsylvania Bar Association in honor of Dean William Clarke Mason, wife of the present president, and wives of past presidents of the association which will hold its forty-ninth annual convention there today through Saturday.

Mrs. Burr of the District and Pennsylvania Bar Association, with offices in Harrisburg and Washington, will accompany Dean Arthur to Atlantic City. She will present Dean Arthur at the luncheon and introduce her in the meeting of the Tax Section, as chairman, before she reovers with the Medical Societies in Pennsylvania. Mrs. Burr will make the committee's report to the convention.

Sgt. James Han

Commed by Gen. Vandenberg

Mrs. J. T. Howard, owner of Colonial Hotel, Fifteenth and streets, has just received a new citation bestowed upon her by Master Sgt. James A. Hance, Maj. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, commanding general of the Nth Air Force.

The general wrote: "You have reason to be proud of role this soldier of yours is playing in the Ninth Air Force, and today writing victories to European skies. His job calling for persevering courage, and above all, knowing, that his effort is helping to dethe war in inevitable victyory."

Sergeant Hance was recent elected president of the new formed Enlisted Men's Club's National Air Command headquarters.

He enlisted in the Army 27 months ago and served for 14 months in the group theater of operations. He is chief clerk in the intelligence section.

Prior to his entrance in the service, he was manager of the Colonial Hotel. His three children, Mrs. J. T. Howard, and James Jr., reside there with their grandmother, Mrs. Howard.

JAMES CRAIG PEACOCK

You know, it's interesting how it came to be started. "Back in the Gay Nineties women were admitted to the local bar and to practice before local courts, even the U. S. Federal Bar, and the U. S. Federal Court.

Captive, an army nurse, married a navy lieutenant and came to Washington to help care for a war invalid. Her husband was injured in World War I and had to give up the practice of law because of his war injuries. The Captive decided to become a lawyer herself and enrolled at the Washington College of Law. She graduated and was admitted to the bar. She then worked at the Department of Justice and became a lawyer for the Federal Government. She became a judge and later a federal court judge.

Time Budget Their Secret
They've Rolled Three Careers
Into One—and Do They Love It?

By Geneviere Reynolds

When a couple of pretty, shapely, wondrously hairless, pinky-fingered women come into your room with more "larning" than it seems you could possibly take in, you'd better sit down and listen, 'cause you're about to learn something. The ladies in question are none other than Mrs. Ruthie Ritchie and Mrs. Piojan, two scholarship students at Washington College of Law. Mrs. Ritchie is married and Mrs. Piojan is a widow, but they have managed to do their own thing and they do it exceptionally well.

Mrs. Piojan

Jane, Mrs. Michel Piojan, is studying for a Lockwood scholarship, given by the Law College. Now in her second year, she almost never misses a class. And she goes everywhere.

"I feel very fatigued sometimes when I start to classes," she confesses. "But the minute I go in I'm on top of it. I may be one of the 500 students at the University of Washington, but I feel I'm very much a part of the course."

Golden-haired Jane Piojan hails from New Mexico. While in the Southwest she became interested in the Spanish minority problems when she and her husband were working with the Indian Service at the University of New Mexico. Now she's directing the Spanish minority program for Office of Inter-American Co-operation.

Taking Care of Baby

Vivacious, black-haired Mrs. Ritchie takes care of the household and travels four hours on the bus each night to attend law school. She is the work editor of "Greenbelt Cooperation," a weekly paper in nearby Greenbelt. Formerly she was employed in the legal reference unit of Division of Communications and Records, Department of Justice. She was graduated from the College of Charleston, Charleston, S.C., and studied at George Washington University here.

Mrs. Ritchie does her studying on the bus, while commuting and getting from home in Greenbelt to the Washington College of Law. She's particularly interested in the problem of cooperative living and thinks an "expanding subject in the post-war world."

How do these two energetic women manage such a schedule? To make a long story short, they budget their time. "Most important of all," they insist, "we have intelligent, sympathetic husbands who like our going to school. If I can make such a schedule, anyone can do it."

Tip to Dateless Girls

What with all their classes, cooking, working, both Mrs. Ritchie and Mrs. Piojan find time for extra-curricular activities. The former is a member of Kappa Beta Pi International sorority and the latter a member of Delta Delta Delta fraternity.

Incidentally, Mrs. Piojan says that if dateless girls, bored with a daily grind looking for a mail-order catalogue, would just study a bit harder, it might just be their appearance.

"First, there are so many beautiful places in law school, a second conversation might improve with broadened interests."

Term Opens Jan. 30
At Law College

The winter semester at the Washington College of Law will begin Jan. 30, Dean Philip A. Adams announced yesterday. She urged all new students entering the college to complete their registration by the first day of the semester, which is Jan. 30, and that all classes be held from 8 to 8 p.m. The school is closed on Saturdays.

Washington College of Law is now registering beginning and advanced students for its second semester, opening Jan. 30. David S. Bress, on leave from the faculty for Navy-duty—will resume his course in Federal Civil Procedure. Mrs. Mabel Love Note will conduct classes in legal bibliography.

Law Semester to Open

The Washington College of Law will open its 1946 winter semester on January 30, it was announced yesterday. Helen Arthur, dean of the law school, urged all students who have to go on to Veterans' Administration hospitals to register immediately.

Miss Aiton, Americanization School Principal, to Retire

Trained Aliens to Become Citizens Through 26 Years

Miss Madeleine Aiton, for 26 years principal of the Webster Americanization School, will resign when she becomes 70 at the end of this month, as was learned today.

Miss Aiton, known to hundreds of foreigners as the woman who prepared them for American citizenship, has been in this service since the establishment of the school. She is now at a private residence, 1500 Madison Street N.W., according to her assistant, Mrs. Ethel H. Wood.

Dr. Carroll R. Reed, assistant superintendent in charge of the Americanization School, praised Miss Aiton for her organization of working relationships within the school, the Justice Department and the school. He said that one "cannot "pimp" by Miss Aiton ever failed to pass the examination for citizenship.

Under her leadership, the school has also taught thousands of citizens of foreign extraction to improve their reading and writing. A motive of Miss. Aiton, the school has been in existence for 10 years. After 10 years, she became a visiting teacher to foreigners' classes and in September, 1919, was appointed principal of the Americanization School.

Miss Aiton has been living with the family of a former student, Mrs. Joseph H. Hansen, 4106 Military road N.W. In 1928 she was president of the adult education department of the National Education Association.

Mrs. Gallagher has served as a lawyer in the Federal State Relations Division of the Justice Department here. She has traveled extensively in the Orient, and her Eastern and Chinese history is one of her hobbies.

Mrs. Gallagher lives here at 1801 G St. NW. Her nomination is approved by the Senate, and the Municipal Court would have two women judges. The other is Ellen H. Bailey.
George Washington Law School Cuts Entry Standards
Two-Year College Training Needed In Place of Degree

For the duration of the war students will be admitted as candidates for the Bachelor of Laws degree at the George Washington University who have completed satisfactorily two years of college work, it was announced yesterday by Dean William C. VanVleck of the Law School.

This is a revision of the university's previous requirement that each student for an LL.B. degree must hold an A.B. degree and its more recent ruling that each student must have completed three years of undergraduate work before entering the study of law.

Registration Tomorrow

Registration in the Law School will be held tomorrow and classes will commence the same day. Registration in all courses in the summer sessions other than law and medicine will be held in the Hall of Government next Friday and Saturday.

The first term in law will extend from June 15 to July 27; the second term from July 28 to September 8. Classes in all other colleges, schools and divisions (except medicine) will run from June 22 to August 4 and from August 6 to September 18.

Most of the basic courses of the regular year are now included in the course offerings of the summer sessions.

Courses Accelerated

The opening date of the summer term has been set so that a student graduating from high school in June may begin his college work immediately and, by attending continuously, complete a four-year college program in two and one-half years. Recognizing that college women will be called upon to assume additional responsibilities in business, industry and
New Phi Delta Delta President Noted as Customs Attorney

By Ruth Dean

The new international president of Phi Delta Delta International Legal Fraternity who brings a unique distinction of being the second woman to be chosen for that position in the history of the fraternity, Miss Vaux, has been noted as a customs attorney and a member of the American Law Women.

As charming as she is intelligently, Catherine Vaux is a gracious representative of her fraternity contingent of her profession. A recent visit to her office in the Bureau of Customs and Excise, where she is an attorney in the enforcement division, found her busily engaged at her desk. Dressed in a gray suit, tailored along neat lines that were in contrast to the severe lines of her office, with its rows and rows of legal books, she appeared not too busy for a short talk about the work which she loves.

In fact, Miss Vaux has the job of her dreams. She handles petitions from ship masters for relief from penalties that have been assessed against contraband consignments inspectors have found.

Miss Vaux said her work took on more importance when her when she was presented with the opportunity of representing a ship with a searching squad of customs officers. She explained, "It had come across the names of two vessels and the ship in the petition, and I don't think any ship that has been convicted of smuggling has survived, but I think the ship that we received, and we have gone through a dictionary definition couldn't give me a definition of what I was reading. After I had the experience of going over the ship and had seen the favorite hiding places where smugglers store their goods, the petitions I read afterward were no longer filled with strange terms I could not understand."

It is only natural that this woman lawyer should be interested in her type of work, as she likes to travel and is greatly interested in foreign trade relations.

Even as far back as her undergraduate days at George Washington University, Miss Vaux had favorite courses were commercial law and foreign trade, and excelled in them. She explained how she decided on a legal career. "It was not a hard decision," she said. "I have always been interested in the law, and it was the thing that I was always thinking about."

At graduation exercises held at the Washington College of Law, last night, two students received degrees from Acting Dean Helen A. Arthur Adair. The Rev. R. Edward Dewey and the First Baptist Church delivered the invocation and J. Edward Burroughs, Jr., member of the college board of trustees, gave the welcoming address at the exercises.

Washington College of Law Will Resume Day Classes

Day classes at the Washington College of Law, 2000 G Street, N.W., which were discontinued during the war period, will be resumed beginning September 14, Acting Dean Helen A. Arthur announced today. On that date, all evening classes for the fall term will begin, the announcement said.

F. More Hubbard, of Diamond Point, N.Y., until recently a counsel for legislative committees of the New York State Legislature, and Robert M. Anderson, with the Department of Treasury and general counsel, are the two new professors.

Two full scholarships will be available this fall, it was announced. Applications are being received in the office of the dean, 2000 G St. N.W.
WASHINGTON COLLEGE OF LAW, 2000 G St. N.W., offers a law course only, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Laws. A course of study requires three years, night school four years. No work is offered for graduate degrees. Individual classes can be taken by persons who satisfy the entrance requirements. Entrance requirements are satisfactory completion of at least two years of college work (that is, completion, with a graduating grade average, of at least half the work required for a degree).

The college is coeducational, but Negroes are not accepted for enrollment. It is approved by the American Bar Association, and for education under the GI Bill of Rights.

Day and night classes commence Monday thru Friday from 9 a.m. to noon. Night school classes meet Monday thru Friday from 6 to 9 p.m. The school year begins Sept. 15 and lasts until mid-June, is divided into two 10-week sessions. A summer term is also taught, but offers only one course per student, and is designed primarily for make-up work.

Fees are $70 a semester tuition for night school work, and $90 and $120 for day school. There are additional charges in both day and night school of $5 a year for library fees and miscellaneous costs, and a $5 fee for registration at a time of a student's first registration, and not thereafter. Payment of tuition is due in advance.

One Lawyer Is Still Diehard

But Judge Gallagher's Getting Practice, Anyway

Judge Gallagher said she didn't think she was being started off in the least important of Municipal Courts.

"I just happened to have been assigned here," she said. "I could have been assigned to Traffic or Criminal Court as well. The law's the same anyway, but just a little smaller in Criminal Court."

Observers noted Judge Gallagher's conduct of trials is in marked contrast to another woman judge, Ellen R. Rader. Judge Rader is quick to pounce on the legal points of a case, direct the debate to just those points, and swiftly arrive at a verdict.

But Judge Gallagher is more easygoing. She seems to work well with defendants as well as legal reasons behind each case. In one trial, allowed two lawyers to accuse each other of criminal alcohols of shyster tactics. Only after some little argument was exchanged did Judge Gallagher call the lawyers back to the case at hand.

SITUATIONS VARY
Judge Gallagher's work is also her consuming interest.

"Each day it's different," she smiled. "You don't have the same situations, but you have different individuals in your case, and their problems are to them the most serious things in the world."

Judge Gallagher told reporters she promises to be a tough judge, but is willing to approach a case differently, depending on the personalities of the parties involved.

"There's no one way to treat all situations," she said. "I try to be flexible and personal about the judicial role."

"I try to make it a personal relationship with the people involved."
Mrs. Fuller Dies; Sister of James Byrnes

Mrs. Leonore Byrnes Fuller, sister of former Secretary of State James Byrnes, died yesterday at Tyrone, N. C., where she and her brother were on vacation.

Some Voices From the Past

Why the United States, the greatest country in the world, should disenthrone the citizens of its National Capitol has never been satisfactorily explained. That taxation without representation is tyranny is a basic principle of our Government. The citizens of the District of Columbia have responded fully to all calls for military and military duties and bear their full share of taxation for the support of the Government.

The election to the House of Congress of representatives chosen by the citizens of the District would be of great benefit to the community, infusing the presence in these bodies of persons familiar with the conditions and needs of the District and directly responsible to the electors. This fact was brought home to me very forcibly some years ago by a lunch at Champ Clark, then Speaker of the House of Representatives. In the legislative jam of the last hour of a Congress, a measure of great civic importance to the District seemed likely to lose. As a member of a committee of interested citizens, I asked the aid of the Speaker, for I knew that he believed in the measure. He realized its importance to the community. He looked at me sternly and said, "You really have me this time. I'm afraid you can do nothing without support in the District!" However, the appeal was so strong that this particular measure passed. March, 1926.

R. G. Medlin Dies at 72; Law Graduate in '42

Robert G. Medlin, 72, a retired postoffice employee from Fort Smith, Ark., who received his law degree here at the age of 67, died Saturday at the home of his son, Robert G. Medlin, jr., of Little Rock, Ark.

Mr. Medlin, a native of Brownsville, Tenn., finished the last two years of his study at the University of Arkansas in 1889, and became an employer of the Postoffice Department in Arkansas about 1890. After 23 years' service, Mr. Medlin retired from the Government and took law studies at the University of Arkansas, from 1934 to 1936.

He received his degree in 1942. Ill health forced him to relinquish a law review course preparatory to taking the examination for admission to the Washington bar. He had lived with his son at 4324 Royal st., Little Rock, Ark., for the past three months.

He was a thirty-second degree Mason, member of the Oliver Wendell Holmes Chapter of Sigma Nu Pi, a legal fraternity at the Washington College of Law, and member of the Fort Smith Ark. chapters of the Knights of Pythias and Salvation Army of the World.

Mr. Medlin is survived by his three sons, Robert G. Medlin, jr., Will A. Medlin of Arlington, and Delroy Brinton Medlin of Fairlington.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at Fort Smith, Ark., and burial will be in the National Cemetery at Fort Smith.

Miss Grogon Dies in Georgia; Votes-for-Women Pioneer

Miss Sara P. Grogon, an active worker in the suffrage movement here during the First World War, died Thursday at the home of her sister, Mrs. William M. Gregory at Savannah, Ga.

Miss Grogon, who was a resident of Washington for almost 50 years, showed her interest in women not only by her activity in the cause for the suffrage, but also by working for equality for women in other fields, by sending several girls through college and by obtaining jobs for a number of her sex. She was one of the women who picketed the White House for suffrage in 1917.

For several years an employee in the War Department, she retired from Government service in 1919 and continued to make her home in Washington until 1943. She was born on the Kurega plantation in Elbert County, Ga., the oldest of six children of the old South written by her niece, Minna Ellis Grogon.

The daughter of a Methodist minister and a mother who was a teacher, Miss Grogon graduated from the Wesleyan Female Institute at Stanlyton, Va. She came to Washington in 1890 to study art at the Corcoran Gallery. She also took up studies at Columbia College and graduated from the Washington College of Law in 1904.

A frequent traveler, she visited many countries, as well as South America, and went around the world twice. She was a member of the National Woman's Party, American Association of University Women, Women's City Club, Columbia, Women and the Daughters of the American Revolution. Her sister is her only close surviving relative.

Woman Author of Legal Books Utilizes Versatility of Talent

By Jessie Font Evans

Rebecca Note, author of "Legal Bibliography and Research," which offers an understandable and progressive guide to the several major categories of legal law indexed in its title, is the serene mother of three children. Less than a year has elapsed since her last made its appearance, yet it is already in use in 13 of the country's outstanding law schools, including Yale University and the University of St. John.

Its modest author is a shining example of a woman career who, in 1918, as first assistant to the law librarian of Congress and acting librarian in his absence, and as a member of the editorial staff of the Comparative Law Bulletin of the American Bar Association, to the present man of her office.

Her husband, the late Mrs. William F. Note, dean of the Forough Service School of the George Washington University and distinguished contributor of the university to the profession, in 1930 she completely submerged herself in 15 years of her husband's interests and in the rearing of his three children.

Returns to Library

When it again became necessary for her to earn her own livelihood this time to help support and educate two daughters and a son, she returned to the Library of Congress as a legal analyst in the Federal law section of the legislative reference service.

In Part 3 of her own three-part law manual this versatile woman who can take a light tone while at the same time she can reduce factors to concrete legal propositions in which she finds the law therein considers all types of American legal publications, reproductions of the law, digests, encyclopedias, annotated reports, the National Reporter system, citations and books in specialized fields of law, both Federal and State. All is before her eyes as she looks at the covers of one volume, a most useful and unusual feature in the particular case given to Federal Government publications and the listing of the official publications of Federal administrative tribunals is the component in part of the Federal Law Journal in its review.

This modern Portia is also given credit for "the logical cross reference" setup in her recent legal publication, as well as for "the balanced manner with which she has planned the whole, so that no individual reference is overshadowed, nor any important one omitted.

Anna Burke, 83, Dies:

Suffrage Leader and Washington Lawyer

Miss Anna Grace Burke, 83, one of Washington's first women lawyers and a leader in efforts to obtain equal suffrage and employment rights for women, died yesterday at the home of a niece, Mrs. William J. Dunham, 404 Hoston Avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

A native of Covington, Ky., Miss Burke came to Washington in 1899 and in 1907 was graduated from the Washington College of Law. In the suffrage movement she was associated with Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and was one of the leaders prominent at the signing of the suffrage amendment to the Constitution by President William Howard Taft.

An employee of the Government Printing Office for 22 years, she sought equal pay for female workers and was chairman of the Civil Service Reorganization Committee appointed by Congress in 1921. She also worked for an improved retirement system.

At her retirement in 1930, she was supervisor of the blinding at the printing office.

Survivors, besides Mrs. Dunham, include a nephew, R. Emmett McPherson, Alexandria, Va.

College of Law Plans July 1 Merger With American University

The 83-year-old Washington College of Law will merge with American University on July 1 to become the university's law school.

It was announced yesterday by John L. Laskey, chairman of the board of trustees of the Washington College of Law, and Robert V. Fletcher, chairman of the board of American University, jointly made the announcement of the merger.

Although the merger is not official until July 1, the facilities of the American University campus have been opened to law college students and they now are considered a part of the student body. The four full-time professors and the 12 part-time professors will be retained to instruct the present law college enrollment of approximately 160.

School Is Near Campus.

The law school is at Twentieth and G streets N.W., in the area of the downtown campus of American University.

The Washington College of Law is accredited as a member of the Association of American Law Schools and is approved by the Council on Legal Education of the American Bar Association and the District Court.

The 2,160 alumni will become alumni of American University.

Plans now call for the law school graduating class to join with the university graduating class in baccalaureate services on May 29 but separate exercises will be held that June.

Tradition to Continue.

Dr. Paul F. Douglas, president of American University, said Dean Horatio R. Rogers, of the law school, had been named dean of the new division of the university.

He said the faculty will be enlarged and that the tradition of the college as a "lawyers' law school" would be continued.

The schools have been working in close cooperation since 1942 when the merger discussions began, he said.

Under the merger agreement, two general and three alumni trustees of the Washington College of Law will be elected to the Board of Trustees of American University.

The law college was founded on February 1, 1896, by Ellen Spencer Mussey and Emma M. Gillett to provide legal training for women.

Miss Gillett attended Howard University law school because at that time women were not admitted to other law schools in the District. Two years later it was incorporated as a non-sectarian, co-educational institution.
Robbery Established as Renner Slaying Motive, Brother Says

Robbery has been established as the principal motive in the slaying of Miss Bettie Renner, according to her brother, Frederick P. Renner, Washington attorney, according to police at the principal motive in the slaying of Miss Bettie Renner. The brother, who arrived here yesterday from Nassau with Miss Renner's body, said Nassau Police Commissioner G. H. Ranse had authorized him to state that the robbery motive had been definitely verified.

He quoted Commissioner Ranse as saying also it had definitely been ascertained that there had been no criminal assault on Miss Renner before the finding of her body in a well near Nassau last Wednesday.

Earlier reports had said a sex peddler hit Miss Renner, 27-year-old blonde, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H., Renner of 1728 51st st. nw.

The police commissioner denied newspaper reports that her body was nude when it was found, the only missing articles of apparel being her slacks, he said. There were marks of a violent struggle. The investigation has shown that Miss Renner, who was vacationing, was called to the Benedictine Monastery in Nassau on Sunday, the day before she was found, to inquire for directions to another monastery.

A priest drew a map for her and she started out on her bicycle. She apparently took the wrong road at a fork, her brother said. Commissioner Ranse told him, for she was seen returning toward the fork, with a cyclist who may have been showing her the correct road. The cyclist has not been identified.

"The Rev. Cyril Keating of Miami, first cousin of the slain girl, will celebrate solemn requiem mass at 10 a.m. today at St. Matthew's Cathedral, assisted by the Rev. E. Jerome Winter, pastor of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, and the Rev. Edward A. Hughes, assistant pastor of St. James Church, Mount Rainier. The Right Rev. Mgr. John K. Cartwright, rector of St. Matthew's, will preach the sermon. Associate Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark was among the officials, lawyers and clergymen who paid tribute to the character of the slain woman attorney, a devout Catholic and Honorary pallbearers for Miss
Lawyer Murdered in Nassau Well

Body of Vacationist Found in Lonely Well

The body of Miss Bette Renner, 38, an attractive Washington lawyer's bicycle nearby, was found yesterday in a lonely well near Nassau in the Bahama Islands, apparently the victim of a sex murder.

Miss Renner was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Renner, 120-29 21st st. sw. She recently associated with the office of a private law firm here, but previously was with the Department of Justice, and the War Crimes Commission in Tokyo. The Associated Press quoted her.

District Woman Lawyer Found Murdered in Nassau Well

G. H. Kane, police chief, said that two detectives were on the scene when the body was discovered. They were notified by a friend of Miss Renner who was staying with her in Nassau. The friend had found the body in the well and notified the police. The body was removed from the well and an investigation was made.

Records showed that Miss Renner had been a student at the University of Pennsylvania and had received her degree from the Washington College of Law in 1934. She was recently associated with the War Crimes Commission in Tokyo.

Miss Renner was associated with the Washington office of the New York law firm, Sterling, Schwartz & Spiegelberg. She was last seen in New York City on April 8th, and was last heard from at her home in New York City on April 9th. She was last seen wearing a red dress and carrying a briefcase.

At the Renner home last night, relatives were not able to answer the door. They were notified by a friend of Miss Renner who was staying with her in Nassau. The friend had found the body in the well and notified the police. The body was removed from the well and an investigation was made.

They are Mrs. Grace Kamode Llewellyn, 2900 Woodley rd. nw. and Mrs. Virginia Bowman, 2922 Eastpines dr. Eastpines, 50d. Mrs. Llewellyn now has law offices in the "talk, blonde, slim, attractive and".
Miss Kent, Teacher 50 Years, Gets Honorary Degree at 94

Miss Sophie Bishop Kent, who taught generations of Washington children during her 50 years in the public schools here, yesterday was awarded an honorary degree as doctor of education at the age of 94.

The degree was bestowed by the Rhode Island College of Education, of which she is the oldest living graduate. It was conferred in absentia because Miss Kent, who now is in a convalescent home at West Warwick, R.I., didn't feel up to attending the commencement exercises in person.

Miss Kent already holds degrees of bachelor of laws and master of laws from George Washington University Law School.

Her former students date back to 1880 when she came here as a girl of 20 to become principal of the Webster School at Tenth and H streets N.W. She remained there for 30 years before becoming principal of the Colored Normal School at Eighth and T streets N.W. She conducted her teaching career at Morgan School, Florida avenue and V streets N.W.

She taught the children of Washington's "cave dweller" society; the sons of generals, diplomatists and congressmen. But she also taught the products of some tough neighborhoods. The children of her earlier pupils frequently showed up in her later classes. She always addressed her eighth grade students as "Mr." or "Miss"—suggesting they were grown up and expecting them to act that way.

In addition to teaching eighth graders by day, Miss Kent taught evening classes in law at the Washington College of Law. Many of her former pupils have distinguished themselves in law, business, politics and the armed forces. She still keeps in touch with them by way of a bedside telephone, which brings her calls from all over the country.

Daughter of a school principal, Miss Kent was born in Rhode Island in 1849 and was graduated in 1879 from the Rhode Island Normal School, as the college which honored her yesterday then was known.

She taught in Rhode Island country schools until 1860 when Gen. William Birney persuaded her to come to Washington. Studying law at night, she received her law degree in 1867 and was a member of the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States and of all the courts here.

Laskey Elected By Law College

John L. Laskey has been elected president of the board of trustees of the Washington College of Law to succeed James Craig Peacock, who resigned as a trustee, will remain a member of the board.

Laskey was a member of the faculty of the college for 10 years and resigned to become a trustee to fill a vacancy caused by the death of his father, with whom he was associated in private practice until 1949, when he was made attorney for a House committee investigating national labor relations board.

In April 1943 Laskey was made chief attorney and enforcement attorney for the District OPA unit, and in January 1944 became attorney for a special House committee investigating food shortages. He obtained his LL.B. degree the following year from Georgetown University.
35 Become Citizens, Dr. Moores Speaks

Dr. Edwin Moores, professor of law at the Washington College of Law, explained the value of American citizenship to 35 persons who took the oath of naturalization yesterday before Justice Edward M. Curran in District Court.

Dr. Moores spoke in place of Godfrey L. Murphy, a past president of the District Bar Association, who could not appear.

Other speakers, who with Dr. Moores, were graduated from the Washington College of Law, were James O. Jansen, now chairman of the bar group, Naturalization Committee, and James T. Gallion, Jr., president of the American College of the Department of Labor and Immigration Service.

Suffrage for District Indorsed By Miami’s New Mayor

City Manager Plan Also Favoried by Robert L. Floyd

Robert L. Floyd, recently elected mayor of Miami and himself a former Washingtonian, yesterday indorsed suffrage here and found a good word too for the city manager system.

The youthful Floyd—before his landslide election to the Miami City Commission last November—declared it “difficult to understand how nearly a million citizens of this county are not allowed to have a voice in representative government.”

City Manageravored

He praised hiring of city managers to run a municipality, asserting that a form of government could be efficient and effective provided the city commissioners do not interfere with the manager. Under the A performers-Ball bill, the District would be run by a city manager.

In Washington to argue before the Civil Aeronautics Board for additional air service for Miami, Floyd also joined other Florida municipal officials yesterday at the White House in an appeal to President Truman for immediate price control and rationing of fuel oil.

Floyd, a graduate of the University of Florida and the Washington College of Law, served as a special agent with the Federal Bureau of Investigation here from 1933 to 1945. He has been admitted to the District bar.

Received Record Vote

He was elected to Miami’s five-man board of commissioners by the largest vote ever given a candidate for that office, and a short time later was chosen mayor by his fellow commissioners.

City Manager Richard G. Demer, a graduate of Georgetown University, who administers policies made by the commissioners, Mayor Floyd, who considers Washington his “second home,” has no use for an administration which is appointed instead of being elected.

“I feel,” he declared, “that the fundamental principle of good government is to make the public office holders accountable to the people they represent.”

American U. Has New Dean

John S. Myers of 5109 Chevy Chase, now, has been named acting dean of American University’s Washington College of Law.

University President Hurst B. Anderson announced the appointment yesterday. Myers will replace Dean David H. Ebbing, of 4019 42d st., who has accepted a senior fellowship at Yale Law School. Myers, a graduate of Harvard Law School, has been a professor of law at American University since 1927.

The college also announced the appointments of Ralph A. Newman of Stanford, Calif., as professor of law, and B. J. Trumbull of 3 Stanley center, Rockville, as assistant professor of law.

Three men will join the part-time faculty. They are: Maj. Gen. Claude R. Buck, 4300 Cortland rd., Chevy Chase, retiring Assistant Judge Advocate of the Army; Eugene B. Pink, former Chief Justice of the Utah Supreme Court, and Edgar A. Moore, Jr., 2003 Bell rd.
Women of Washington

By Peggy Preston

Occupy the high-backed judge's bench in the lofty chambers of the Court of Small Claims in a diminutive newcomer to Washington's Municipal Court.

She is Nadine Lane Gallagher, soft-voiced Southerner, whom President Truman plucked from the Justice Department and elevated to a judgeship a few months ago. Measuring a mere 5 feet 1 inch, Judge Gallagher hardly looks the role of the successful woman jurist. A slight and dainty figure in her austere black robes, she never manages to look other than completely feminine as she perches well forward in her chair to survey her court.

There is, indeed, nothing brash or hard about this woman who is the latest of three of her sex to be appointed to the Municipal Court bench. Even in her conduct of her court she remains essentially feminine.

Her attitude is one of patience and a willingness to help all those who seek the aid of her court. Observers note that she appears to savor the human as well as the legal reasons behind each case, that she searches, even more than the average judge, to reach a true, impartial verdict on the dramas of everyday life unfolding before her.

Easy-going and mild mannered, Judge Gallagher lends her position an air of gentle dignity. But she is, nonetheless, a hard-working judge who centers all her energy on her job.

"I find it an all-consuming interest," she explains. "No two days are ever the same, for new personalities figure in every case. Each day opens a new vista of human problems."

Judge Gallagher opens her court each morning at 9:30. She remains there until late in the afternoon, with only a short intermission for lunch. Evenings, frequently find her in her office, studying points of law, or at home in her own library where she often reads late into the night.

Not so many years ago this energetic, pretty woman, was just another young wife, with nothing more important on her mind than the usual bridge parties, dances and other social activities that occupied members of her set. During her childhood and girlhood in Washington she had no dreams of becoming a prominent woman lawyer and judge.

Soon after her graduation from Central High School she married a newspaperman and went to the Orient on a two-year honeymoon. While living in China she studied Far Eastern and Chinese history, traveled extensively in Japan, Manchuria and Korea.

Later, back in Washington once more, she took a job and became interested in law. She enrolled in night classes at Washington College of Law, inspired by the leadership in her field of the school's dean, Mrs. Grace Hayes Riley.

Thereafter Nadine Gallagher went up the ladder of success rapidly. She became a member of the American Bar Association, the Inter-American Bar Association and president of the Women's Bar Association of the District of Columbia. She figure as well in various civic organizations, was vice president and member of the board of directors of the Women's City Club. In between she continued her interest in another dramatic and wrote "Madam Juror" and "Lawyers of the Western World Confer," two articles creating favorable comment.

This personal life of Judge Gallagher centers around her home which she shares with her mother. They live in a spacious apartment, part of a renovated old mansion in downtown Washington. Here, in the restful, high-ceilinged rooms, Mrs. Gallagher finds a pleasant retreat from her active professional life. In the summer she enjoys a vacation on Maryland's Eastern Shore, where she walks, sleeps, swims and forgets law books for a few weeks.

Here's a full life and a happy one, but she appears to thrive on it. Her large, gray eyes smile as she says, "It is impossible to be bored with law."
Marie D. Doyle
To Become Bride

The engagement of Miss Marie D. Doyle to Mr. William Wright Fleming, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Howard Fleming of Washington, D.C., is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elton Norborne Doyle of Warfield, Va. The wedding will take place next month.

The bride-elect received her LL. B. degree from Washington College of Law, where she was elected to Phi Delta Delta, legal sorority. She is a member of the bar of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Fleming was graduated from George Washington University and is a patent lawyer with the Department of Justice. He is a member of the Patent Lawyers' Club, the Federal Bar Association and the American Patent Law Association.

Miss Snider to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Snider of Rector, W. Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Snider, to Mr. William Snider, Jr., of Warfield, Va.
